Matthews Does Honors as Climax Of Pageant on Watergate Stage

By Lee Grove
Post Reporter

Joan Russell, the Connecticut princess chosen queen of the Cherry Blossom Festival, received her crown yesterday.

Some 10,000 persons were on hand to see the coronation—climax of the festival pageant, "Spring Is a Wonderful Thing."

"A rare privilege and distinct honor," said Secretary of the Navy Matthews, placing the sparkling crown on the head of the 1950 queen, whose slim brunet beauty was set off by her white dress with bouffante skirt.

The coronation, "by authority of the Greater National Capital Committee," took place in the presence of the queen's court—all the princesses of the States and Territories.

Kay DeWitt Sings

The princesses, beginning with Miss Alabama (Jo Ann Vann) and Miss Alaska (Helen Carlson), had entered by twos in alphabetical order. When grouped together they afforded a geographical cross-section of American beauty.

Kay DeWitt, as "Miss Sesquicentennial," sang an introductory welcome to the princesses, who joined in singing "America the Beautiful."

Prior to the coronation the princesses had sat with their escorts from the armed services in a special section on the river bank.

Sunny skies and agreeable weather featured the pageant, Saturday's performance of which had been canceled. The pageant will be repeated again next Saturday and Sunday afternoons.

Audience Participates

Following an audience-participation "Festival Sing Time," with Milt Slosser at the organ, the show got off to a start with a "Musical-Revue-sical" presented by the Navy School of Music Glee Club, followed by Miss De Witt singing "Cherry Blossom Time," and the James A. Mulroe Tap Dancers.

Martin and Florenz, "Stars on Strings," were succeeded by Ray Mott and Pedro, acrobatic comedians.

"The Big Movie Show in the Sky" found the Naval Glee Club, the Navy Band Orchestra and Soloist Ben Mitchell Morris participating in a program highlighted by a squadron of 11 planes passing twice over the Watergate crowd.

Marion Kiatta and Roy Roberts singing "Spring Is a Wonderful Thing," and their lavishly wardrobed spring ballet, repeated the festival motif of youth and gaiety.

Five Rescued As Canoes Upset In Potomac

Three men were rescued from the Potomac River by harbor police yesterday about a half hour after their canoe capsized in the Georgetown channel, just below the 14th st. railroad bridge. Police said the water was very choppy.

The men are Carl C. Richter, 23, and James E. Kelly, 32, both of 1418 21st st. nw., and Clyde F. Dunkle, 28, of 2120 P st. nw. They were treated at Emergency Hospital for exposure.

Harbor Boat No. 4, just leaving the Memorial Bridge on duty at the Cherry Blossom Festival, brought the men to a sea wall nearby. A police car took them to the hospital.

Earlier in the afternoon a canoe containing two youths capsized just below Key Bridge in the Potomac. Companions in a nearby boat rescued them.

Thousands Take to Outdoors

Time Flies 'Neath Sunny Skies As Spring's Tried On for Size

By S. L. Fishbein
Post Reporter

That slow, drowsy stroll broke out all over Washington yesterday. It was understandable. For the first time this year, it was sunny, it was Sunday and it was spring, all at once.

In furs and bonnets and lightweight topcoats, in slacks and sweaters that turned many a young man's fancy, the folks poured outdoors.

At the Zoo the slowest strollers couldn't match the agonizing crawl of a day-long stream of motorized citizenry. At 4 p. m. it took an auto almost a half hour to first-gear from the Klingle rd. entrance to the Adams Mill rd. gate.

The ordeal included fording a 30-yard stretch of water 6 inches deep which spilled over from the creek. Parking space worried no one—it didn't exist.

When it was all over, a crowd of about 65,000, not counting the big pink balloons, had been through the preserve. Capt. J. A. Collins, chief of the Zoo police, said it was the record crowd for 1950 thus far.

Connecticut Avenue had its share of animals' too. Soft, docile little animals' draped around the necks of promenading ladies in a kind of preview of next Sunday's Easter parade.

Though the pace remained casual, fashions changed in different parts of town. As always, on Capitol Hill wide eyes, strange license tags and poised cameras were most prominent. In Rock Creek Park and at Hains Point, girls wore slacks and boys wore gleams.

The sixtyish temperature was diluted by a strong breeze, leaving insistent echoes of spring's recent harsh days which kept the city's

Palm Sunday Services Draw Thousands

Some Turned Away At Overcrowded District Churches

(Pictures on Page B-1)

By Martha J. Hall
Post Reporter

Palm Sunday drew thousands of Washingtonians to church services yesterday.

Early services generally were lightly attended. But by 11 a. m. churches were crowded.

Many heard services in auxiliary rooms over public address systems. Some were turned away.

In Roman Catholic, Episcopal, and some other churches, palms were distributed following the services.

After church, trolleys and buses were filled with men, women and children carrying the palm branches or wearing small crosses of palms on suits and coats.

Services of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church held at Lisner Auditorium, 21st and H sts. nw. were jammed.

Every seat in the vast auditorium was filled by 10:45 a. m. and a long line of would-be churchgoers waited outside to get in. Ushers were forced to tell more than 300 they would be unable to attend the service because of the limited space.

The 1600 who were able to get into the auditorium heard the Rev. George M. Docherty preach his first sermon as pastor of the church He was installed on Thursday.

Like the city's other ministers, he based his sermon on the Gospel

Man-Hating Fox Fights Motorists, 'Trees' One

Richmond, Va., April 2 (AP).—A man-hating fox held three amazed motorists at bay in Chesterfield County last night.

James Wooldridge and two companions were blooked on a country road when a fox stood steadfastly in front of their auto, paying no heed to horn tooting and shouts.

The men got out and threw stones at the fox. He charged them, "treeing" Wooldridge on top of the car. His friends ran into the woods. A farmer shot the defiant fox.

A Dutch subject visiting friends at 1809 Parkside dr. nw., Miss Kosher went out to mail a letter. She found a red-painted, official-looking box at 16th st. and Kalmia rd. nw., just after 7 p. m. It looked like the mailboxes of Holland. She pulled the handle.

She was still trying to stuff the letter through the hole in the little glass door when three fire companies arrived.

Police helpfully mailed the letter—in a box painted olive.

Insurgents Strip ADA Of Party Tag

Minority Plank Adopted to Force Assertion of Group's Full Independence

By The Associated Press

Insurgent elements in Americans for Democratic Action took control yesterday and forced the 3-year-old "liberal" organization to assert its full independence of the Democratic or any other party.

A highly vocal antileadership group put through by a 30-vote margin a minority plank striking out all reference by name to President Truman's "Fair Deal" and progressive elements in the Republican Party.

The language stricken from the convention's policy commission platform was that adopted in 1949. It said the ADA recognizes that for achievement of liberal purposes "cooperation with the Fair Deal elements of the Democratic Party affords the best opportunity on the national level at this time."

The qualifying words "at this time" had been added to the 1949 platform by the leadership, but this did not satisfy the insurgents.

Also, stricken was a sentence saying this does not preclude "cooperation with and support of progressive elements of the Republican Party."

Plank, As Approved

As approved, the plank came out this way:

"ADA reaffirms its political and organizational independence. We will continue to work for the nomination and election of candidates for public office of whatever party, when their records are consistent with the principles of ADA."

The organization reaffirmed its opposition to a third party as "injurious to liberal purposes."

The insurgents were led by Gregory J. Bardacke, head of the Connecticut chapter, and Leo A. Lerner, of Chicago, ADA national treasurer.

The self-styled liberal, anti-Communist organization includes many former New Dealers.

Charles M. LaFollette, former Republican Congressman from Indiana and now "national director" of ADA, tried unsuccessfully to insert a section saying the ADA should not be obstructed from trying to develop the Democratic Party into a "genuine party of the people."

Francis Biddle, Attorney General under President Franklin D. Roosevelt, was elected ADA "national chairman" to succeed Senator Hubert Humphrey (D., Minn.).

Biddle's Interpretation

Asked his interpretation of the insurgents' floor victory, Biddle said:

"The ADA is not simply an annex of what is left of the New Deal party." He added he did not see why the ADA should turn into a political party uniting all liberal forces, but he did not close his mind to that possibility in the future.

The domestic platform adopted was along the general lines of the Truman program with a few exceptions. For example, it opposed loyalty tests for positions and grants of fellowships which do not clearly affect national security. It also expressed deep concern

GOP to Ask That Jury Get 'Spy' Charges

Demands Reported Drafted as Probers Consider Subpena For McCarthy Files

NYHT News Service

Demands that Attorney General J. Howard McGrath place before a Federal grand jury charges that Owen Lattimore, Far Eastern expert, is a top Communist agent were reported being drafted yesterday by Republicans.

The groundwork for forcing a grand jury investigation of Lattimore, who has heatedly denied the charges, was laid last week by Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.) in a four-hour speech to the Senate.

At that time, Senator McCarthy by-passed a Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee created to investigate his charges of Communist activities in the State Department and announced he had furnished the Federal Bureau of Investigation with documents and the names of witnesses who he claimed would identify Lattimore with Communist activities.

Due to Appear Tuesday

Lattimore, who returned Saturday from a United Nations mission to Afghanistan, called Senator McCarthy a "madman" for making the charges. He is scheduled to appear before the Senate Investigating Subcommittee on Tuesday to make a detailed denial under oath.

Senator McCarthy's ignoring of the Senate Investigating Subcommittee led Senator Theodore F. Green (D., R. I.), acting chairman, yesterday to call a meeting of the group today to discuss the possibility of subpenaing the Wisconsin Senator's files.

The information sent directly to the FBI included six documents. He also announced he had given to the FBI the name of a witness who, he asserted, will identify Lattimore as known to be a member of the Communist Party. The mystery witness is understood to be Louis F. Budenz, former editor of the Communist newspaper, the Daily Worker. Budenz renounced communism.

Meanwhile, yesterday it appeared certain there would be a bitter row in the subcommittee if the Democratic majority presses to subpena Senator McCarthy's files. Senator Bourke B. Hickenlooper (R., Iowa) asserted that he will oppose the move.

Waiting for Deadline

Members of the subcommittee also were waiting for the deadline Tuesday for honoring subpenas served on the State Department, the FBI and Civil Service Commission for loyalty files of persons charged as bad security risks by Senator McCarthy.

The subpenas were served last week on Secretary of State Dean Acheson, Peyton Ford, assistant to the Attorney General, and Harry B. Mitchell, chairman of the Civil Service Commission, after President Truman had ordered the information withheld from the subcommittee.

The only District residents who were being checked off for the current census yesterday were 824 men and women who couldn't very well get away from the enumerators.

They were the inmates of the District jail.

The census taken in the jail yesterday undoubtedly went off faster and with less trouble than the work entails on the outside.

The enumerators had no trouble identifying themselves. They were eight jail and custodian officials.

Everyone was at home at the time the enumerators called, between 9 a. m. and about 2:30 p. m., when the job was completed.

There were no suggestions that the enumerator should come back "when my husband is home," and no refusals to give information.

Search for Kidnaped N. Y. Baby Shifts From D. C. to Winchester

Search for 12-day-old Chaneta Holden, whose life was jeopardized by her kidnaping in a New York hospital last Thursday, shifted yesterday to Washington and Winchester, Va.

New York Detectives John Gannon and William Mara, accompanied by a taxicab driver who can identify the young woman kidnaper, came here early yesterday.

Then acting on the tip of Troy Tucker of Roanoke, Va., a Greyhound Bus driver, they went to Winchester where they were at work last night.

While they were here, the New York detectives conferred at length with Lieut. R. J. Cox of the Metropolitan Police pickpocket squad. Lieutenant Cox covers bus terminals here extensively in his work.

Details of the conference were not made public.

A. Thomas Boyd, chief of police at Winchester, said last night he has turned over "full facilities" of his department to Detectives Gannon and Mara in a search for the woman kidnaper and the infant. All lodging houses, tourist homes, railway and bus stations, and similar facilities will be checked.

Also, last night, Maryland State Police were busy in the vicinity of White Plains, Md., as result of information from New York. At a bus terminal there, to which the woman kidnaper and infant were

Gray Ordered to Help Foreign Nations Find Dollars for U.S. Goods

Truman Asks Fast Action to Keep Trade Alive When Marshall Plan Aid Ends in '52

Key West, Fla., April 2 (AP). President Truman tonight ordered quick action to create dollars abroad to keep international trade alive when Marshall Plan aid ends in 1952.

He directed Gordon Gray, retiring Secretary of the Army, to formulate a plan to help foreign countries find the hard currency necessary to pay for United States exports.

The trade balance is now being maintained by annual United States grants totaling five billion dollars.

Gray will undertake the study as a special assistant to the President, relinquishing his Army post to Budget Director Frank Pace, jr.

The President pointed out that American assistance has enabled war-torn countries to strengthen their economies against Communist subversion and aggression.

The task of finding a way to maintain these economies without direct dollar grants from the United States "is of major importance to this country."

Memo Sums Up Problem

A memorandum released by Presidential Secretary Charles G. Ross, compiled from information received from official sources, summed up the problem in this way:

"Since the end of the war, world trade has been maintained by the huge volume of exports needed for postwar relief and recovery.

"We are now exporting annually about 16 billion dollars of goods and services. We are importing annually only 10 billion dollars of goods and services. Of the difference of about six billion dollars, approximately five billions is being paid for by United States grants."

When the European Recovery Program ends at the close of 1952, this memorandum pointed out, the termination of foreign assistance will create tremendous problems at home and abroad unless foreign countries can obtain the necessary hard currency to make payments for United States goods.

Task of Major Importance

In a letter to Gray, the President declared:

"The task which you are undertaking is of major importance to this country."

With United States postwar assistance, he said, war-ravaged economies have been built up

Recent Testimony Revealed

McCloy Warns of Real Crisis With Russians in Germany

Russia has stepped up its pressure on American forces in Germany to the point where a "real crisis" seems almost inevitable, United States Commissioner John J. McCloy warned Congress in testimony made public yesterday.

The United States High Commissioner for Germany told a closed-door session of a House Appropriations subcommittee that the Soviet pressure is a result of confidence rather than any "sense of inferiority or fear of attack" by Western forces.

The Russians "feel their strength" and have "immediate hopes of success," McCloy said.

Maj. Gen. A. P. Fox, deputy chief of staff to Gen. Douglas MacArthur, said Russian tactics in Japan have boomeranged, however, and communism there is "on the very definite decline." He said Japanese war prisoners returned from Russia have decided the Soviets fed them "lies and untruths."

McCloy pulled no punches in his description of conditions in Germany.

"Their points of attack are Germany and the Far East," he said of the Russians. "But Germany still is their main goal. With it they feel that they would most rapidly and effectively shake the hold of democracy in the West.

"The struggle is immediate and intensive. We in Germany feel

Air Force Refueling Squadron Flies Today for European Test

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

The Air Force disclosed yesterday that it has a flying tanker squadron in operational status and that the unit will leave its Arizona base today to engage in long-range aerial-refueling bomber missions over Europe.

An announcement said that the Second Air Refueling Squadron, equipped with converted Boeing B-29 Superfortresses, will fly from Tucson to England today to join its "parent" organization, the Second Bombardment Group. With the "parent" unit, which is equipped with Boeing B-50 bombers, it will engage in "routine training," the Air Force said.

This is the first official disclosure that the USAF has an aerial refueling unit "operational," although prior announcements said that six B-29 bomber groups and three B-50 groups would have a flying tanker squadron of 20 planes each.

First European Test

It is also the first time that regular, day-to-day Air Force training in this new technique of extending the range of American bombers has been scheduled over Europe. By taking on gas en route, the 2300-mile "radius of action" of the B-50, operating from British bases, can be extended beyond the Ural Mountains.

The first known aerial fuel transfer took place 27 years ago over Kelly Field, Tex. Six years later, Gen. (then Maj.) Carl (Tooey) Spaats and his crew staged the

26 Are Injured In Lehigh Valley Train Collision

Mauch Chunk, Pa., April 2 (U.P.). Twenty-six persons were injured when a one-car shuttle train plowed into the rear of a crack Lehigh Valley Railroad express on a curve near here late today. Three persons were hospitalized.

The Black Diamond Express, en route from New York to Buffalo, N. Y., was halted because of Diesel locomotive trouble when the accident occurred a quarter-mile from the station here.

Ten persons, including the engineman and brakeman of the gas-electric shuttle train, were treated at the State Hospital in nearby Hazelton.

Sixteen persons who were hurt or shaken up on the express, were treated on the train and it resumed its journey after a one-hour delay, officials said.

Jet Fighters Get Secret Radar Sight

Device Used to Aim Guns, Rockets, Bombs; Tried in AF Contest

Las Vegas Airbase, Nev., April 2 (AP).—A secret radar sight for jet fighters that does everything but fly the plane is being used by some teams in the Air Force gunnery contest here.

Officials permitted disclosure of details of the electronic wizard today and hinted that future models may even fly the plane.

The new sight automatically solves all the fire-control problems for machine guns, rocket firing and dive bombing. It can be used in daylight or dark against any target that reflects a radar beam, such as an airplane, gun or ship.

For other targets, the radar can be cut out and the sight locked in position for manual control.

The sight, known as the "A-1C," was designed under the direction of Dr. Stark Draper at the confidential development laboratory of Massachusetts Institute of Technology. The gyroscope division of the Sperry Corp., Great Neck, N. Y., put it into production and is continuing its development.

With the "A-1C" the pilot simply keeps the target inside a circular pattern of light or reticule.

The sight releases bombs automatically at the proper times.

Two Premiers Meet in Effort To Bring Hindu-Moslem Peace

New Delhia, India, April 2 (AP).—The Moslem and Hindu Premiers of Pakistan and India met here today for more than two hours in a last-ditch attempt to settle bitter disputes that could open this subcontinent to Communist rule.

Amid elaborate security precautions, Premier Liaquat Ali Khan arrived from Karachi, his Moslem capital, for a conference with Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru that may last two or three days.

Their immediate task is to find some solution for the frenzied clashes between Moslem and Hindu mobs on both sides of the border in East and West Bengal in recent weeks. The clashes have taken a toll of hundreds of lives and caused widespread arson, pillaging and an exodus of thousands of terror-stricken refugees.

Official sources said this question was discussed in a cordial atmosphere at the first meeting today.

Other disputes also were touched upon. Arrangements were then made for the discussions to be resumed Monday. The secretaries on both sides also exchanged notes.

Some of the more fanatical elements have staged demonstrations in Calcutta demanding arms and liquidation of East Pakistan, an island of Moslems centered in East Bengal.

Republican Seen Slated for High Air Force Post

John A. McCone, Los Angeles businessman and a Republican, is expected to be named Undersecretary of the Air Force.

Air Force Undersecretary Arthur S. Barrows has submitted his resignation, Air Force circles said last night. McCone, a friend of Thomas K. Finletter who is expected to be named Air Force Secretary, probably will succeed Barrows.

President Truman last week said he was switching Air Force Secretary W. Stuart Symington to be chairman of the National Security Resources Board.

McCone, 48, is president of the Bechtel-McCone Engineering Corp. and was a member of the President's Air Policy Board in 1947, headed by Finletter.

Kenneth D. Johnson, New York attorney and educator, meanwhile, was reported in line for appointment as Undersecretary of the Army.

Defense Planners To Seek More Funds

99-Word Version

GOP Puts Its Platform On Postcard

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Republicans last night came up with a 10-point, postcard version of the "Liberty vs. Socialism" platform they adopted in February and prepared to put it to campaign use.

The new version reduced to just 99 words what the earlier declaration of party principles said in 2000, but it still failed to meet the views of most of the Republican "Progressives" who criticized the original.

These commended the brevity of the new draft, but said brevity wasn't enough.

At least one of the earlier critics, however, had a hand in the condensed platform, listing "reducing taxes" and "balancing the budget" as points one and two. Left for the tenth and last point was the key GOP slogan, "Safeguarding Liberty Against Socialism."

Suggested by Senator Smith

In releasing the platform "digest," the National Republican Senatorial and Congressional Committees, with the Republican National Committee concurring, said it "grew out of a suggestion by Senator Margaret Chase Smith of Maine, who was consulted in its preparation."

Mrs. Smith had complained that the original "Statement of Republican Principles and Objectives" was too wordy to be of any effective campaign use.

Here are the other points in the new summation of what the Republican Party stands for:

"(3) Eliminating government waste, especially along lines of Hoover Commission reports.

"(4) Fighting communism here instead of condoning it.

"(5) Providing fair market prices on farm products aided by price supports — cooperative marketing, soil conservation, reclamation, rural electrification—no Brannan plan.

"(6) Continuing and improving Taft-Hartley law to protect public from excessive power of labor and management.

"(7) Developing an adequate social security system that does not limit opportunity nor discourage initiative and saving.

"(8) Protecting rights of veterans and minorities.

"(9) Developing a united American foreign policy for peace—world trade without undermining American living standards."

Ives Still Opposes It

Senator Irving M. Ives (R., N. Y.), one of the progressive wing leaders who criticized the original declaration for underplaying civil rights and not spelling out a more specific stand on some other points, said last night his original objections still stand.

"I commend the brevity, but there are various kinds of brevity," said Ives. "I assume this is merely a condensation of the February 6 statement and I haven't changed my opinion of that.

"I still think we should specifically indorse fair employment practices and other civil rights legislation and state just what kind of a labor-management relations act we favor."

Representative Jacob K. Javits (R., N. Y.) voiced similar objections. Said Javits: "It certainly should have found room for the Republican position on civil rights and FEPC."

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, jr., (R., Mass.), another leading critic of the original draft, could not be reached for comment on the condensed version.

Liberal Statement Likely

Lodge has since elaborated his own ideas of what a Republican declaration should say. Reports are still current that these and other liberal-wing Republicans may come up with a joint statement.

In answer to the critics, proponents of the 1950 GOP declaration say it wasn't intended as a departure from the more liberal 1948 Republican platform, but rather as a "supplement" to it. Yesterday's news release on the "digest" again stressed that it "supplemented" the 1948 plans.

The condensed version was prepared at the direction of Senator Owen Brewster (R., Me.), chairman of the Republican Senatorial Committee, and Representative Leonard W. Hall (R., N. Y.), chairman of the Republican Congressional Committee, with the cooperation of Chairman Guy G. Gabrielson, of the Republican National Committee.

"The three GOP committees intend to use the digest in campaign material during 1950, and it is expected that Republican candidates will incorporate it into their campaign pamphlets," their news release said.

By the United Press

Congressional defense planners said yesterday they would try to add 583 million dollars for new Navy and Air Force planes to the $29,045,030,164 omnibus appropriations bill which comes up for debate in the House.

They revealed their plans as Representative John Taber (R., N. Y.), a leader of the Republican-led economy bloc, accused the Administration of trying to sneak the money bill through the House "before the people have an opportunity to learn what is going on."

At the same time, Senators Burnet R. Maybank (D., S. C.) and Styles Bridges (R., N. H.) said they would offer amendments to give the Navy more money for anti-submarine warfare when the bill reaches the Senate. They proposed to modernize and convert mothballed destroyers and submarines for sub-killing duty.

Billion-Dollar Cut Sought

Economy-minded House Republicans have set their sights on trimming at least one billion dollars more from the bill which carries funds for nearly all Government operations except foreign aid. It also does not include fixed costs and interest on the national debt. The Appropriations Committee already has reduced President Truman's request by $1,567,900,504.

But Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) said his House Armed Services Committee has drafted amendments which would add another 200 million dollars for more Air Force planes, 383 million dollars for extra naval planes and still another $34,500,000 to improve radar defenses in the Northwest.

The amendments would provide money for the purchase of 607 new planes and the modernization of 299 others.

Vinson's statement came on the heels of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's recommendation for a 500-million-dollar increase in the 1951 defense budget. The general testified Wednesday before a Senate appropriations subcommittee and elaborated Saturday in a letter to committee chairman Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.).

Two Billion for Planes

In his testimony, Eisenhower called for more money for planes, anti-submarine warfare and Alaskan defenses. In his letter he urged immediate strengthening of Alaskan ground defense and modernization of ground weapons.

Vinson said he would offer his amendments when the House takes up the section of the bill providing $13,911,127,300 for the armed services. As it now stands, the measure carries about two billion dollars for plane procurement.

Chairman Clarence Cannon (D., Mo.) of the House Appropriations Committee, said he hoped the House could begin acting on amendments to the bill before it takes a 10-day Easter recess starting Friday. But the GOP economy bloc promised to talk at length on the bill and some Congressmen doubted any votes would be taken this week.

Leaders Plan Conference for Jewish Appeal

Prominent private citizens, Government officials and labor leaders yesterday announced a national conference to plan the 1950 United Jewish Appeal for $272,455,000.

The conference will be sponsored by the National Christian Committee of the United Jewish Appeal and will be held in the Shoreham Hotel April 15 and 16.

Representative Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr. (D., N. Y.), chairman of the committee, announced the appointment of seven associate chairmen: Maj. Gen. William J. Donovan, former head of the Office of Strategic Services; Gov. Alfred E. Driscoll of New Jersey; Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson of Illinois; Drew Pearson; Dr. Robert G. After the war, Britain's Sir Alan J. Cobham developed improved refueling methods, and the United States stepped up research in the field.

The round-the-world, nonstop flight of the Air Force's Lady Luck II a year ago was accomplished by the "flexible hose" method. Under it, the tanker plane flies just ahead and above the receiver and both reel out lines with grapples. When they connect, the tanker pulls in the bomber's line and attaches a hose to it. This is then reeled in by the receiver and the fuel is fed by gravity.

It works, but is not considered satisfactory for fast-feeding, all-weather, any-altitude operations. Two newer systems have been developed to meet these objectives. They are the British "probedrogue" plan and the American "flying boom" technique.

Under the former, the tanker reels out a flexible hose with a funnel—or "drogue"—at the end, which is stabilized to keep the wide end of the funnel in position.

The receiver is especially equipped with a "probe"—or intake pipe—on the nose or wing and the pilot simply flies it into the "drogue." An automatic coupling device clasps the two and the fuel is fed into the receiving plane under pressure.

The flying boom system, developed by Boeing, employs a telescoping pipe, hinged to swing up or down and from side to side.

Boeing engineers removed the tail turrets of the experimental B-29 tanker and installed a pilot's seat with miniature controls for a new type of crewman—the "aerial gas station attendant." He releases and telescopes the boom and then controls it by means of "ruddevators"—which combine the essentials of rudders and elevators.

This crewman "flies" the fueling nozzle into a special fuel socket of the receiving B-29 atop the nose, just forward of the four-gun turret. Pressure fueling replenishes the receiver at much higher rates of flow and at greater altitude than possible with prior hose systems.

The flying boom has been fully evaluated and production orders have been let to supplant the present flexible hose apparatus in Air Force refueling squadrons. There is to be one squadron of 20 air tankers with each of the nine medium bomber (B-50 and B-29) 45-plane groups.

One advantage of the British system today is that it is possible to refuel three jet fighters at once by trailing three hoses. Boeing is experimenting with boom "multi-feeding." Two specially-equipped USAF Republic F-84 Thunderjet fighters recently conducted secret tests with the British system at the RAF research base at Tarant Ruston, England. The Air Force said yesterday that an F-84 has conducted tests over Seattle with flying-boom equipped B-29s.

In January, a $677,295 Air Force contract was let to North American Aviation to modify an undisclosed number of RB-45 jet reconnaissance-bombers to receive fuel in the air from B-29 tankers equipped with the flying boom system.

The Air Force hopes, by these means, not only to extend the range of both its conventional and jet medium and light bombers, but also make it possible for jet fighters to escort bombers on medium distance missions. Another objective is to permit jet fighters to be flown to Europe if needed in a hurry. Jets have been flown across the Atlantic, but the distance between stepping stones is so great that the craft have to wait for good weather on each leg.

Engineer Pay Action Is Asked

An AFL affiliate, gravely concerned with an impending "dangerous" oversupply of engineers, is prodding Congress to provide the engineers some measure of protection against an expected slash in pay rates.

The International Federation of Technical Engineers, Architects and Draftsmen's Unions is plugging for legislation to place engineering employes under the protection of the Davis-Bacon and Walsh-Healey Acts. These laws require the payment of the prevailing local wage rate to employes of firms engaged in public building or doing business with the Government on procurement contracts.

The federation fears an outpouring of some 47,000 engineer graduates this June will flood that professional labor market and drastically reduce the present average starting salary of $275 a month, by as much as $50.

The trouble is that there are only 17,000 engineering jobs available for the new graduates, says the union, quoting from Department of Labor statistics. Therefore, the union figures, three engineers will be clamoring for each available job. Graduate engineers, in order to remain in a crowded field, may have to be willing to accept subprofessional jobs at salaries lower than the subprofessions now receive, the union warns.

The surplus in engineers will reach 90,000 by 1952, according to the union—again quoting Government figures—despite the fact that the demand for engineers is high, especially in the atomic field.

Only a minority of the engineers would be covered by the Walsh-Healey and Davis-Bacon legislation, but the protection for these engineers would provide a "strong checkrein" against wage reductions by uncovered competing employers, the union argues.

Bills to provide the desired coverage have been introduced in the House by Representative Roy Weir (D., Minn.)

West Berlin Expects Patter, Not Putsch

7000 Casualties

Red Defeat At Hainan Is Reported

Taipei, Formosa, April 2 (AP).—The Chinese Nationalists today claimed complete annihilation of the largest Red force yet to invade Hainan island.

Here, in brief, is the Nationalist story: 5000 Red invaders slaughtered and more than 2000 captured in a land, sea and air battle that raged for 12 hours Saturday.

Nationalist supporters proudly declared it meant the old days of running were ended, that the forces of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek were bent on meeting and defeating the Reds.

As if to emphasize this attitude, the Nationalist air force announced that on Saturday night it raided the Kiangwan and Tazang airfields at Shanghai, heavily damaging runways and buildings.

The air force also announced sinking of nearly 100 junks in attacks Saturday at Foochow, Hangchow Bay and other east-coast points south of Shanghai.

The Hainan landings were within 5 to 10 miles of Hoihow, Hainan's capital on the north coast. They apparently were at five points, since five batches of prisoners were mentioned.

Hongkong, April 2 (AP).—Seven of 71 transport planes taken over by Chinese Communists were sabotaged today by time bombs which blew up at 10-minute intervals at Hongkong's airport.

None of the planes was seriously damaged, but the small explosions did enough to ground each one indefinitely.

Berlin, April 2 (AP).—Allied intelligence sources said today the Whitsuntide "march on Berlin" by the Communists is apparently going to be a propaganda invasion instead of a putsch, as previously reported.

They said the Soviet Control Commission in eastern Germany stepped in and ordered that the emphasis of the rally be changed from fighting to words, presumably because the Russians think the "Free German Youth" (FDJ) ambition to "conquer" the Allied sectors of Berlin is riskily premature.

The latest Communist plan, these informants said, is to infiltrate about 10,000 to 20,000 agitators in small groups to harangue West Berliners on the street in an effort to convert them. The rally is scheduled to take place May 27 to 30. Communists have said 500,000 members of FDJ will participate.

But Allied officers now have received information that the rank and file of the FDJ will be supervised closely by East German people's police and kept engaged in the eastern sector of Berlin in a rigorous schedule of political pep talks, cultural activities and sports.

Earlier arrangements in the eastern provinces to train FDJ zealots with the people's police for street fighting have been altered, it was said.

But a thousand or so elite agitation groups will try to slip into West Berlin piecemeal to convert some of the population to the Communist side.

Communist periodicals have ceased to predict that young Red marchers will smash their way into West Berlin by the hundreds of thousands.

There is no letup, however, in the nuisance campaign of scattering leaflets and holding unauthorized local meetings of the FDJ in West Berlin.

10,000 Are Vaccinated In Glasgow Smallpox

Glasgow, Scotland, April 2 (AP).—More than 3000 persons were vaccinated in Glasgow today as health authorities fought a serious outbreak of smallpox. Two hundred hospitals have been quarantined in the west of Scotland.

Vaccinations in Glasgow alone rose beyond 10,000 for the weekend, and four new health centers were opened.

Twenty-one patients are under treatment for smallpox, which has caused the death of a woman doctor. Four women and a baby are seriously ill.

McCloy Warns of Real Crisis With Russians in Germany

that we are facing a critical point in history and I think no person sensitive to the forces which play over Europe today can feel differently.

He told the Congressmen it was his duty to be frank and express his "sense of the real crisis that impends in Europe."

Communist activities in the German area have been increasing both in extent and variety in recent weeks, McCloy said.

"You have heard of the Soviet-sponsored East Zone military police," he told the subcommittee. "Our current information indicates that the present strength of the organization, which is separate from the regular police force, numbers approximately 45,000 and that it may be expanded to several hundred thousand."

On the reported Communist plans for a march of 500,000 youths on Berlin May 28, McCloy said that could become a "serious affair." He said he expected the marchers "to come in a solid effort to disrupt the Western sector."

"There will be a great deal of talk about the national front, the united Germany, and much damning of the United States will go on," he said. "We have this situation under careful observation, as I say, and are determined that regardless of developments, that no demonstration, juvenile or otherwise, shall deter us from our course and our objectives in Berlin."

McCloy said he felt no great concern over it "except as a manifestation of the increased tempo of Soviet pressure."

Officials who testified on the situation in Japan presented a much more optimistic picture.

Fox attributed part of the "very definite decline" of communism in Japan to the return of some war prisoners from Russia.

The 10,000 or so men who were repatriated, he said, had been thoroughly indoctrinated in communism by the Russians. But when they returned to Japan most of them found that what they had heard about American occupation forces were "lies and untruths," Fox told the subcommittee.

"The effect of their indoctrination is no longer seen in Japan," he said.

Japanese records show some 390,000 Japanese remain in Siberian prison camps, Fox said. The Russians have said those already repatriated are the only ones remaining to be sent home.

A trade deadlock between the two nations also is an open sore inflamed by India's devaluing its rupee last September in step with the British pound, while Pakistan failed to do so. Recently, there have been indications, however, of improvement of trade relations between the two countries, whose economies naturally supplement each other.

Everything at Steak!

by Albert Parchey Mesirow

THE benevolent despot who has ruled our kitchen for 12 years is a genial giant by the name of James (Mack) Heller. Chef Heller decided to make food his career while he was still a small boy in Calvert County, Maryland. His mother's chicken-with-fluffy-dumplings, he says, converted him to the philosophy that the preparation of fine food is a noble calling, by which a man can serve his fellow man with dignity, pleasure and profit. For 42 years he has devoted his abilities, his 6-foot 1½-inch frame and 256-pound bulk to the study and practice of flavor. As a teacher, too, he has been eminently successful. Chef Heller is proud that 4 of his proteges are now famous Washington head chefs, including the genius who presides over the kitchen of our esteemed competitor, the Neptune Room. Chef Heller fancies himself as a formidable pinochle player in his off hours, but is modest about the fact that he was once pocket billiard champion of the District, Maryland and Virginia. In the kitchen, Chef Heller's tyranny is complete. His is the insistence on perfection that makes (we are told) every meal at Parchey's a feast. I hope that Chef Heller celebrates his 25th anniversary here . . . and I hope you hope so, too!

steaks! steaks! steaks!

Mr. Jim Berryman, the Pulitzer and Broun prize-winning cartoonist of the Washington Star, came in the other evening, and after partaking of one of our steaks, made a quick sketch of his impression of our Chef. It's a really noble and very original work which we hope to reproduce for your enjoyment in this column soon.

steaks! steaks! steaks!

I'm understandably flattered by your "fan mail." Included this week was a very gracious note from a very gracious lady, Mrs. Philip Graham, the lovely wife of the Publisher of The Washington Post. The Grahams entertained Managing Editor and Mrs. Wiggins at dinner here. Wrote Mrs. Graham in part, ". . . I enjoy your original advertising ever so much, and the dinner we had more than lived up to it . . ." Many thanks for all your kind words.

steaks! steaks! steaks!

This week we are departing from our long-standing custom, and will serve our mouth-watering clam chowder on Thursday as well as on Wednesday and Friday. Chef Heller is the author of this succulent gustatory triumph, but being a man of genuine good will, is perfectly willing to share the recipe with you. Here it is. He starts with the finest chowder clams . . . plump, juicy, sweet and butter-tender. These we obtain from the ancient firm of Wm. Cottrell & Sons, Waretown, N. J. Chef Heller scrubs them and then boils them, in the shell, in fresh water. When the boiling water has opened the clam shells completely, clams are removed and coarsely chopped, and the water strained through a fine sieve and transferred to another pot. Meanwhile, the Chef has chopped, very fine, some juicy, sweet Bermuda onions; crackly-fresh and pungent "golden heart" celery (which we import direct from the rich, black loam of Michigan) and firm, plump green peppers, rushed to us from the warm, good earth of a Florida garden. These he sautes in creamery butter, until the onion particles are clear and limpid as a maiden's eyes, and tender as her forgiving heart. Then, into the pot they go, with the clams and juice and some finely diced Maine potatoes (not refugees from the E. C. A.!). Judicious seasoning with salt, pepper, Worcestershire and Tabasco is followed by half an hour of simmering. Then, a moment before serving, fresh buttermilk is added, one part to every ten of chowder. The result is a Lucullan fantasy of flavor the memory of which will live pleasurably with you for many a day. But why try to make it yourself? Enjoy it at Parchey's on Wednesday, Thursday or Friday of this week. The address: 19th St. at K, N. W.

steaks! steaks! steaks!

Mr. Arnold McKee, Jr. (the Alfred P. Sloan of the local automotive world), had as his guests here last week, United States Commissioner Cyril Lawrence and Mrs. Lawrence. And Mr. and Mrs. James Booth, also visitors, remarked that they had been attracted to Parchey's by this column, and added "Our first meal here was wonderful!" Your humble servant declares that nothing will be spared to make your first and every succeeding meal here an equally satisfying gastronomical experience! I hope to greet you at Parchey's soon. Got the address? 19th at K Street, N. W.

House Group Hears Alien Bride Today

Mrs. Ellen Knauff, 35-year-old war bride, detained at Ellis Island off and on since 1948, will get a chance to tell her story to a House Judiciary Subcommittee today.

Representative Francis E. Walter (D., Pa.), author of a bill to set aside the order for her deportation, called a meeting of his subcommittee for 11 a. m., after a New York appellate court cleared the way for her appearance.

The Walter subcommittee last Monday considered bringing contempt proceedings against Edward J. Shaughnessy, district immigration director in New York, when he ignored a committee subpena to produce her then.

U. S. Immigration Service officials here said Shaughnessy acted at their direction, pending a decision by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in New York on a lower court order denying to her a writ of habeas corpus.

Last Tuesday the appellate court reversed the lower court in a 2-to-1 decision, clearing the way for her appearance today.

Judge Jerome Frank, in the court's majority opinion, ruled that the Attorney General's office had acted "capriciously" in attempting to deport Mrs. Knauff while legislative action in her case is pending.

When Shaughnessy last week ignored the Judiciary Committee subpena, members of the subcommittee not only considered contempt proceedings but angrily lashed out at the Immigration Service.

Walter said then that the group not only favored reporting out the bill canceling the deportation order, but that he personally would push legislation to require hearings by a board of special inquiry before an alien was deported. He said no such hearing was held in Mrs. Knauff's case.

Mrs. Knauff tried to enter this country after her marriage in Germany in 1948 to Curt W. Knauff, a United States war veteran, who is now a civilian employe of the American Military Government in Germany. She herself had seen service with the British Royal Air Force and American Military Government.

Walter said Mrs. Knauff has never been given a reason for her deportation except that she was regarded as a security risk.

Mrs. Knauff appealed to the Supreme Court, but lost on a 4-to-3 decision. The court majority ruled the Attorney General has the power to exclude an alien without a hearing, and that the lower courts had no right to interfere with such administrative discretion.

"against communism, subversion or aggression," production has increased and the problem has shifted "to the field of trade."

The present "extraordinary assistance" this country is giving, he warned, "is, of course, a temporary measure."

"Our basic purpose has been, and must continue to be," Mr. Truman went on, "to help build a structure of international economic relationships which will permit each country, through the free flow of goods and capital, to achieve sound economic growth without the necessity of financial aid."

He added that the present unbalanced situation "places a heavy burden upon our national budget."

He ordered Gray—who takes over the presidency of the University of North Carolina in September—to coordinate the work of all Government agencies looking into the problem and develop "the broad lines of policy" for submission to the people and Congress.

Gray responded by saying he would serve for the period of time before he goes to the university. He added that Pace would step in as Army Secretary "at an early date." Frederick J. Lawton succeeds Pace as budget director.

D. C. Palm Sunday Services Crowded

account of Christ's triumphal entry into Jerusalem on the first Palm Sunday nearly 2000 years ago.

Stressing the importance of Palm Sunday in the Christian year, Mr. Docherty warned that "if we think only of the secular year, we might discover that the secular year is secularizing Christian life."

"Do we think that by coming to church on Easter we are going to be saved, when 51 Sundays of the year we do not bother?" he asked.

Easter time, Mr. Docherty declared, "proclaims that our sins can be redeemed by a living belief in the Saviour who walked to Calvary."

At St. Matthew's Cathedral, 1727 Rhode Island ave. nw., palms were blessed at the 10 a. m. mass. As is traditional in all Catholic churches on Palm Sunday, the complete account of Christ's passion, taken from the book of Matthew, was read at all services.

At Luther Place Memorial Church, the Rev. Dr. L. Ralph Tabor said "of course it's good to be with the Palm Sunday crowd. It's thrilling to join in singing praises; to declare our faith in honest, measured words."

"But what matters most is whether we'll be standing by Him when the crowd is silent and the cost is plain to see. Tomorrow, and all the tomorrows, will we be standing with that mind in us, which was also in Christ Jesus?" he asked.

The tragedy of the Palm Sunday multitude of Jerusalem was its inability to see its deepest needs, the Rev. Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden said at First Baptist Church.

It was looking for a man to save the nation from economic and political disaster and failed to see that Jesus Christ came to save them from their sins, he said.

At Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, 900 Massachusetts ave. nw., the Rev. Dr. John W. Rustin emphasized the need to "go beyond the law."

"The greatness of any nation lies in this high realm where men and women in their relations of life do far more than ever could be demanded of them," he said.

"In taking upon Himself of the cross, Jesus was taking that which no one could demand of him, and which he could have escaped. But because he could not escape without sidestepping major issues he refused to sidestep them, and therefore faced the Cross," Dr. Rustin said.

With Palm Sunday, Holy Week, the most sacred time in the Christian year, began. It will be marked with special services in all Christian churches. In Catholic and some Episcopal churches there will be Tenebrae on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

Protestant churches will have Holy Communion services on Maundy Thursday. On Friday there will be three hour services commemorating the crucifixion and on Sunday Easter services marking the Resurrection.

Newsmen to Preview 300 MPH Air Service

Representatives of Washington newspapers will be among the 110 reporters who will preview the Nation's first 300-mile-an-hour coast-to-coast aircoach service Tuesday and Wednesday in New York City.

American Airlines will fly them between LaGuardia Field and Los Angeles on preinaugural schedules. Regular 70-passenger DC-6 aircoach flights will begin on Easter Sunday, clipping more than three hours from previous flight time.

trees and flowering plants mostly bare.

Thus the lollers of P st. beach sat wrapped in coats and sweaters. Today the temperatures may inch up to the middle 60s, but it will be Monday otherwise. Rather cloudy, windy, scattered showers likely, the weatherman says.

A more energetic breed than the strollers and lollers and slow-moving motorists also took advantage of the smiling day.

The Rock Creek cavalry was out en masse, patrolling the bridle path alongside the parkway. Tennis courts were full, the harbor police reported a heavy boating day, and cyclists pedaled round and round Hains Point.

And the golfers—well, golfers don't bother much about the weather, anyway.

traced, she said she intended to go to White Plains. However, no trace of her has been found in that area.

News service stories from New York said that the FBI has joined the hunt there. Officials at headquarters here maintained a strict "no comment" silence last night.

The FBI has jurisdiction in kidnap cases where the victim is taken across a State line. Ordinarily, the Government agency steps into such cases where a reasonable time has elapsed without solution of the case or definite information no interstate angle is involved, on the presumption that there may have been interstate transportation.

The baby was born prematurely to Mrs. Clarence Holden, 24, in Lincoln Hospital in the Bronx. She weighed only 2 pounds, 11 ounces, and was being kept alive in an incubator. Physicians feared she would die outside the incubator. Thursday night, nine days after the birth, a young Negro woman picked the child from the incubator, wrapped it in a red skirt, and fled.

Subsequently, the woman obtained a bunting and blankets, wrapped the child in those, and put on the red skirt. Then, according to New York police, she took a cab to a midtown bus terminal.

It was there, drivers and attendants told police, that the woman mentioned White Plains, Md. Working round the clock, New York detectives traced the woman on buses as far as Baltimore, according to the Associated Press.

The next tip came from Tucker, through Lester Simpson, a Greyhound dispatcher here. Tucker said that a woman, answering the description of the kidnaper boarded his bus at 10:30 a. m., Friday, out of Washington, for Winchester, and carried an infant with her.

Another bus driver, whose name was not obtainable last night, said he remembered a passenger Friday for White Plains, a tiny community about 25 miles southeast of Washington, near LaPlata.

Detectives Gannon and Mara, accompanied by the New York cab driver, spent five hours at the Greyhound terminal here yesterday, questioning drivers and attendants.

Afterward, they talked by long distance telephone with Tucker, who was off duty at Roanoke. Immediately after the talk with him, they left for Winchester.

A 13-State police alarm gave this description of the kidnaper:

"Arrest for kidnaping, an unknown female; Negro; 22 to 25 years old; 5 feet 2 inches tall; 120 pounds; black bushy hair; Kelly green cloth coat; white blouse; firehouse red skirt; low brown shoes; white woolen gym (bobby) socks. She may be carrying a newborn Negro female infant in a blue bunny suit, two blue receiving blankets, one pink receiving receiving blanket."

GOP Leaders Plan Club on Capitol Hill

Some of the Nation's top Republican leaders have banded together to buy property on Capitol Hill for a club-office building for GOP organizations and their members, Representative James C. Auchincloss (R., N. J.) said last night.

The "founders" of the organization have incorporated under Delaware laws with a capitalization of $1,175,000 and the name of Capitol Hill Associates.

The 76 "founders"—100 will be the limit—include such figures as former President Hoover, Senators Taft, Saltonstall and Owen Brewster, Representatives Joseph Martin, jr., and Clarence Brown, Mrs. Joseph R. Farrington, Harold E. Stassen, John Foster Dulles and GOP National Committee Chairman Guy G. Gabrielson.

Auchincloss said the "founders" have already surveyed as a possible sight the George Washington Inn, New Jersey ave. and C st. se., adjacent to the New House Office Building.

In addition to the "founders," Auchincloss said, Capitol Hill Associates is authorized by its charter to issue with SEC approval 25,000 shares of common stock at $50 a share. Founders' stock is $100 a share.

"The general idea," the New Jersey Republican said, "is to provide office space for various units of the Republican Party. For Republicans who come to town, we plan to have eating and dining rooms."

The "founders" are due to meet in Washington this week to select a board of directors.

Census Takers Have Easy Time Checking D. C. Jail Inmates

non, in charge of the jail at the time for the Corrections Department, declared:

"I've never seen anything go smoother."

The census was conducted by the seven men and one woman custodian on a cellblock-by-cellblock basis.

Small groups of prisoners from each block were taken in turns to the dining room for that block. There each inmate sat down at a table with the custodian assigned and answered the regular census questions.

The custodians, who had been specially sworn in for the census duty, reported they received full cooperation.

Elsewhere, enumerators rested their feet yesterday after beginning their grind on Saturday, and in preparation for a full week of pavement pounding and doorbell ringing.

While there is no official ban on Sunday census work, the canvessers were instructed not to work on that day, on the theory that some citizens would object to being interviewed on their day of rest, officials explained.

The first census casualty in the District was reported yesterday by Albert Craig, manager of the census area, who said a woman enumerator here had sprained her ankle while working on Saturday.

The first threat of a lawsuit over census taking in the area was reported to Craig from Silver Spring, Md.

A prospective enumeree there somehow found out the name of the enumerator for his section. It was a woman. The citizen telephoned her and informed her in strong language that she could just skip his house when she got to it in her rounds.

The enumerator came back with a threat to sue him for the language he used over the phone, whereupon the citizen announced he would sue the Census Bureau for "threatening" him.

Aside from such wrinkles on the smoth operation of the 1950 nose counting, things are going along fine, according to Craig, whose area covers Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and North Carolina, as well as the District.

Today, a training class will be held for about 25 new "reserve" enumerators who will replace any who resign.

Farm Price Sleuths Have Difficult Job

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Did you ever hear of the CIB?

Chances are that you haven't. But CIB—the Compliance and Investigation Branch of the Department of Agriculture—has one of the toughest jobs of any detective force in the country.

Made up of only 146 persons, of whom more than 100 are highly trained sleuths, the force operates out of five field offices. Its job is to police the Government's far-flung, four-billion-dollar farm price support operations.

Last year CIB collected more than a million dollars in fines and recoveries, its director, William H. Duggan, reported to Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan. It investigated 1452 cases, and got back $663,212 that had been fraudulently obtained from the Government. The cases ranged from tiny, almost inconsequential violations to one case where a man was made "payments in excess of $100,000" for "ineligible potatoes" or potatoes grown in violation of acreage allotments or marketing orders.

The Government's stocks of surplus commodities are so enormous that some are stored in nearly every community, large or small, in the United States.

They are so large and widely scattered, that not long ago the CIB sent a man to prison who has stolen 60,000 bushels of wheat from the Government, which the Government didn't miss for several months.

In another case in Maine, CIB secured conviction of a prominent State legislator of selling "ineligible potatoes" to the Government. The man, wight W. Dorsey of Fort Fairfield, was fined $15,000 and sentenced to eight years and eight days in prison. The prison part was suspended because of the accused's heart condition. His son, a partner, was fined $2500.

Attention was directed to the force a week ago by a spectacular case in New Jersey. Eight men were arrested charged with making $50,000 in an illegal potato deal. They were charged with buying 29,000 sacks of surplus spuds at 1 cent a sack of 100 pounds. They promised to dehydrate them and export them to Europe. Instead, the Government alleges, they resold them to the Army at $1.80 a sack.

The New Jersey case was only one of about 20 on which CIB detectives have been working recently involving potatoes. Cases are referred to CIB nearly every day from the Federal Bureau of Investigation, city, county or State police throughout the country. Occasionally the Secret Service sends them cases involving forgery of Commodity Credit Corporation or Production and Marketing Administration certificates.

The cases involve violation of the price support laws or marketing orders governing cotton, peanuts, oranges, tobacco, and a score more farm items, including even winter pears in Oregon.

CIB also has pending several cases hanging over from wartime days. One of these was settled a few days ago, when the J. L. Hardin Co., Inc., of Brooklyn pleaded guilty to using more than its ration of corn and peanut oil during the war and was fined $500.

In these days of vast surpluses, it seems strange that the Government still is prosecuting men for using too much grain. But only last January a criminal information was filed against the Trenton Chemical Co., of Trenton, Mich., for using more malt barley than it had been allotted for making distilled spirits in December, 1947, and January, 1948.

CIB also prepares cases for civil action. Recently CCC brought suit against McIntosh & Hitchcock of Denver, Colo., for negligence in storing Government wool. A broken water pipe ruined 662 bags of wool, CCC says, and it wants damages of $12,865.

CIB men patrol State borders for violations of marketing agreements. When three fourths of the farmers vote for local marketing agreements, all growers are subject to the rules voted.

Recently Walter M. Smith of Tampa, Fla., was fined $100 for shipping uninspected oranges to Georgia. Frank Marchesotto of Thonotosassa, Fla., was found guilty of sending oranges to New Orleans that weren't Temple oranges as he had claimed.

Paul D. Jones, Inc., of Hollandale, Mich., are charged with shipping 11 carloads of potatoes from Michigan to Kansas City, Texas and other points, that were of a size and grade prohibited to leave Michigan. Criminal informations charging 12 violations were filed against the firm.

In Raleigh, N. C., several men were arrested charged with borrowing from the Government on cotton they didn't raise. Only cotton actually produced by the borrower is eligible for Government loans.

A group of New Yorkers got fines ranging from $2000 to $10,000 totaling $40,000, and prison sentences totaling 11 years, after being found guilty of stealing powdered eggs belonging to CCC. Although CCC is trying to give away powdered eggs, it won't permit strangers to steal them.

Early in March Nick Dombrowski of Amherst Junction, Wis., got afoul of the law when agents charged him with peddling potatoes to Wisconsin housewives. There is no law in Wisconsin against peddling, but CIB claims Dombrowski bought them from Uncle Sam for 1 cent per 100 pounds to feed to his hogs.

The cases filed by CIB in recent weeks range from $100 to $50,000 in losses. During the war they prosecuted cases involving illegal use of commodities in short supply, while today they have to police commodities in surplus.

One Eastern dairy man paid back $10,000 he had collected from his customers for watered milk. Another claimed he should not be prosecuted for watering milk, because his customers were Mexicans, not Americans.

The usual excuse offered when confronted with proof is "everybody was doing it." The CIB operators do not make arrests. They gather the evidence. Prosecution is up to local officials.

Daily Press Conference

The sound and fury coming out of Washington these days resound more loudly throughout the country because of the paucity of constructive information about the day-to-day developments in our foreign affairs. Sensationalism and rumor-mongering have moved to the center of the stage because it was otherwise unoccupied. One astute correspondent recently likened the situation to a game of cops and robbers among the diplomats and newspapermen. The result has been to divert attention from the struggle for a free world and produce an absurd distortion of values. National attention is centered on flimsy charges and peanut politics in the midst of one of the gravest contests that mankind has ever experienced.

Sober-minded men of both political parties have joined in condemning the rumor-mongers who are thus debauching our way of life. But it is not enough merely to denounce those who rush in to occupy a vacuum that should never have been allowed to develop. The public mind is likely to continue to be preoccupied with mud-slinging and factionalism until responsible leaders once more give us a renewed awareness of the great international struggle that is taking place and of the part the United States is playing in it. We suggest, therefore, that Secretary Acheson move back to the center of the stage by holding a daily press conference.

There are three reasons for making this suggestion: (1) The press is grumbling over the trickle of news coming out of the State Department. Keenly aware of the world-wide fight for men's hearts and minds, the press and radio are eager to tell the story of the day-to-day events in this great drama, thus reflecting the public appetite. But they find a meager diet of news. The Secretary of State is not taking full advantage of the great opportunity the press and radio offer for daily communication with the people. (2) The burden of keeping the people informed falls with special weight upon Secretary Acheson because of the limited attention that President Truman can give to foreign affairs. President Roosevelt often acted as his own Secretary of State; so did Wilson. With Mr. Truman doing little of the work of exposition in this field, it becomes the more imperative for Secretary Acheson to keep the people cognizant of their world problems and responsibilities. (3) The tempo of events is too fast to depend upon arousing the people to a new sense of unity if an emergency should develop. What is needed is a day-to-day awareness of world events and a mutual flow of confidence between the people and the Secretary of State that would leave him less vulnerable to partisan jibes and innuendo.

There is eminent precedent for such a daily press conference. In the bewildering days after World War I and the Senate's rejection of the League of Nations, Secretary Hughes met the press daily (often twice a day) in addition to keeping his door open to any journalist seeking background information. "Nothing is more difficult," he said, "than to maintain the proper contact on the part of a public officer, particularly in the great departments, with public opinion." Nevertheless, he insisted on maintaining that contact with the effect of winning widespread support for his policies.

Today the need for daily communion between the Secretary of State and the people is even more acute. In the contest between communism and the free world there is overwhelming unity among the American people. They know the nature of the evil, but they do not know what is expected of them. Their latent sense of oneness must be nurtured to make it thrive—nurtured, not by propaganda, but by constant communication that will give the people a sense of participation in the policy that is followed. In a free country a foreign policy can be no stronger than its standing with the people.

Labor And Machines

The President's Council of Economic Advisers has said that the economy would be in danger when unemployment reached the five-million level. President Murray of the CIO notes in an address before the CIO Pennsylvania Industrial Union Council that in February the country was only 316,000 away from this danger mark. We take little stock in arbitrary pronouncements of this sort, since it is impossible to determine the precise point at which unemployment becomes a national menace. Business may be flourishing and workers with jobs may be steadily employed at high wages, even though large numbers of people are out of work.

A great deal depends upon the causes of unemployment; idleness may be the result of shrinking business that forces factories to dismiss workers. That is a snowballing process that has a progressively depressing effect on business activity and does endanger the entire economy. The current rise in unemployment, however, is occurring during a period of business prosperity, with production at high and rising levels. It is due in part to the growth of population and in part to the introduction of labor-saving devices increasing the per capita output of workers. Unquestionably this kind of unemployment creates serious social problems, but their solution does not lie, as Mr. Murray implies, in resisting the introduction of labor-saving devices and dispersing industrial profits among the people. That way lies industrial stagnation.

The remedy for unemployment lies rather in creating new industries and in lowering production costs so that existing industries can expand their markets and provide more jobs. Industrial expansion, moreover, calls for capital expenditure, much of which is supplied from the retained profits of industry. If industrial profits were to be dispersed, as Mr. Murray suggests, presumably by paying higher wages to the workers employed by profitable businesses, demands for some kinds of consumer goods might be stimulated, but the development undertakings that would provide jobs for new entrants into the labor market and displaced workers would be retarded. After all, it is the lure of profits that provides the needed incentive for venturing into unexplored territory and founding new enterprises that will absorb the unemployed.

"Clean" Mundt Bill

The new version of the Mundt Communist registration bill reported out by the Senate Judiciary Committee has been cleaned up in several particulars. Even after the lavish applications of soap it has had, however, it still entails sweeping and arbitrary invasions of American liberties unwarranted by the acknowledged threat of subversion. Furthermore, it is dangerous on another count. Although its announced purpose is to force the Communists to operate in the open, its probable effect would be quite the opposite.

Like its predecessor, the new Mundt bill would set up a three-man Subversive Activities Control Board with tremendous powers to decide, without any definite criteria, whether groups were "Communist political organizations" or "Communist front organizations." All such organizations would be required to register with the Attorney General and maintain accurate lists of their membership; in the case of "Communist political organizations" the names of members would be made public.

The bill would, of course, prohibit members of Communist organizations from holding any Government job. In addition, it would deny use of the mails or radio broadcasting facilities to any registered group unless the material were plainly marked as coming from a Communist source. It would make it illegal for any member of a "Communist political organization" to apply for or use a passport. Finally, it would make it a crime for anyone knowingly to conspire "or agree with any other person to perform any act which would substantially contribute to the establishment within the United States of a totalitarian dictatorship." Curiously enough, under a new provision of the bill, membership in a Communist organization is not to be construed as a violation of this provision.

Many of the objections to this procedure are obvious. A Government board would have well-nigh absolute powers to tell private American citizens what groups they could join without inerasable stigma. The criminal provisions are so vague as to open the door to great abuse. What, precisely, is "any act which would substantially contribute" to the establishment of dictatorship? Could it be, to use a far-fetched example, the one-party system in the South? Moreover, as the Department of Justice has pointed out in a letter to Chairman Wood of the House Un-American Activities Committee:

> A world of difference exists, from the standpoint of sound policy and constitutional validity, between making, as the bill would, membership in an organization designated by the Attorney General a felony, and recognizing such membership, as does the employe loyalty program under Executive Order 9835, as merely one piece of evidence pointing to possible disloyalty. The bill would brand the member of a listed organization a felon, no matter how innocent his membership; the loyalty program enables the member to respond to charges against him and to show, in a manner consistent with American concepts of justice and fairness, that his membership is innocent and does not reflect upon his loyalty.

Although the bill goes to great lengths to avoid the formal outlawing of the Communist Party, for practical purposes it would accomplish just that. It would make membership in Communist organizations without registration a crime. This is not the traditional American approach, which requires the commission of an overt act of subversion before a person can be adjudged guilty of subversion. It is reminiscent of the thought control which used to arouse such mirth among Americans when it was introduced in prewar Japan.

In another category the Mundt bill is of dubious constitutionality. If the conviction of the 11 Communists under the Smith Act, which makes it a crime to advocate the overthrow of the Government by force or violence, is upheld in the forthcoming court test, then membership in the Communist Party will per se be evidence of such advocacy. In that case registration under the Mundt bill would amount to compulsory self-incrimination.

If the Mundt bill actually would accomplish the purpose of forcing the Communists into the open and protecting the integrity of the Government, that would be one thing. But should anyone in this day and age be deluded that the really dangerous Communists are those who go by that name and hold party cards? Surely the Kremlin's masterminds are persons who shun party meetings and even are known as anti-Communists. The restrictive features of the Mundt bill would only serve to push beneath the surface the visible portion of the Communist Party, which, like an iceberg, is six sevenths submerged anyhow. In this it would make inordinately more difficult the work of the FBI.

Losses At Dupont Circle

For many months the Dupont Circle area has been cut off from normal intercourse with the rest of the city. Buses and automobiles have had to make sweeping detours around blocked roadways, and until the underpass was recently opened for passage of trolleys, exploration was necessary to locate temporary car stops. Pedestrians had to skirt man-made canyons and cautiously negotiate narrow paths littered with debris in order to reach the shops and stores in the neighborhood. On rainy days, mud and water added to the hazards encountered by the intrepid souls who ventured into this region of desolation, stupefying noise, and general confusion.

Merchants located in the area are now considering whether to ask Congress for an appropriation to cover the heavy business losses resulting from such conditions. We trust a way will be found to compensate them for the undeserved hardships inflicted on them by the march of progress—if such it can be called. It is believed that a sound basis exists for claiming compensation on ground of "inequity of opportunity"—that is, inability to carry on normal business during the construction period.

To be sure, many public improvements, such as the closing of streets for repairs or reconstruction, entail some losses to business concerns in the vicinity. But usually the inconvenience is of short duration, and the losses are soon offset by the benefits resulting from the improvements. In the present case the losses have been severe and have resulted in the forced closing of quite a number of stores. Moreover, it is highly doubtful whether the underpass will increase the attractiveness of Dupont Circle as a shopping center. Certainly the problematical gains of the future cannot be counted on to offset the losses of the immediate past.

The chief difficulty encountered in presenting claims for damages will be to find a satisfactory way of appraising the extent of the losses suffered by individual concerns. Estimates will necessarily be rather "rough and ready," based on comparisons of sales volume before and after construction got under way. The test of the reasonableness of claims of this sort lies in establishing the fact that losses have been excessive and offering convincing proof that those losses are due to public construction activities. When public improvements necessitate condemnation of private property, the owners receive compensation. It seems only fair, therefore, that the Dupont Circle merchants should be indemnified for the loss of business profits resulting from public improvements financed by the District. That kind of compensation is a legitimate part of the cost of public improvements and should be borne by all District taxpayers.

Naming Aggressors

When the Council of the Organization of American States meets today as the provisional organ of consultation for the Foreign Ministers, it will have a chance to do a great service for this hemisphere. That service will consist of adopting, without watering down, the full report of the OAS committee which investigated the disturbances in the Caribbean and pinned responsibility on the Dominican Republic, Cuba and Guatemala. Reports have been current that certain OAS Council members are anxious to soften the blunt findings of the report. If anything, the recommendations derived from the admirable factual presentation need to be strengthened. For example, the proposed investigation of the arms traffic in Latin America ought to be spelled out. Most basic of all, of course, is the establishment of a permanent watchdog commission to insure compliance with the recommendations by the guilty nations. Without a watchdog commission (and means of enforcing the peace if OAS directives should be flouted) such obvious recommendations as the conclusion of bilateral treaties could be a sham. The treaty between Haiti and the Dominican Republic, for example, was violated by the latter within only a few days after it was concluded last June. Both the frank naming of names and continued scrutiny are essential; the principle of nonaggression can never be upheld by temporizing. For the OAS Council to duck this responsibility would be to set a disastrous precedent that would make the whole inter-American machinery meaningless.

YOUTH

Youth,
Running hand in hand
Through a meadow of wild flowers.
Overhead the fleecy cloud-lining of the sky
Is none too airy to romp upon—
Youth treading a brook's mossy bank
Of leafy twigs, green and tender—
In the silvery circle of a moon
Like a drapery held carelessly
They dance to the rift of a song.

Dangerous Listening

In the old days of the Republic, citizens listened to what music they pleased.

A Government employe (we still class such employes as citizens) was accused of playing "Russian records" in his home. This was not a McCarthy charge. It happened in a proceeding under the President's Loyalty order. The press was excluded for the benefit of the employe.

True, security considerations apparently forbade revealing whether the proscribed records included Tschaikowsky symphonies or were limited to such dangerous items as Peter and the Wolf and the Red Army March.

Even so, how far can we have lost the freedom of our forefathers!

Liquor Advertising

I have noted your March 28 letter from W. W. Wachtel, president of Calvert Distillers Corp., who will surely be pleased if we accept his conclusion: "Sincere efforts to solve those problems won't be found by hamstringing or destroying the liquor industry, but in research and cooperation between all segments of the community."

To avoid argument at this time we need not debate the Langer bill or prohibition. I should suggest, however, that Mr. Wachtel set an example of cooperation in a direction which does not call for great research. He may not feel inclined to point out that whereas "a brand new car" is intended to transport one somewhere, and an airplane is intended to get one there faster, the sole claim that can be made for liquor is that it will transport one to a world of exhilaration if it does not get him to complete, if temporary, extinction.

Specifically, may we look for a series of advertisements by Calvert which will warn all who drink to note their so-called capacity, and to stop short of the point where they will be a nuisance or a menace to others and a self-constituted burden on their own physical and financial resources?

Rights In Virginia

The citizens of the Nation and of the Old Dominion owe a great debt of gratitude to Armistead Boothe, Edwin Lynch, and many other members of the late Virginia Assembly for their statesmanlike attempt to kill intrastate segregated travel and to institute study of all the laws that relegate Negroes to the status of second-class citizenship. Mr. Boothe did not realize how much support there was in Virginia to correct the ills perpetuated by laws of the nineties. Of the hundreds of citizen groups that appeared during the hearings on the bill, including even former Governor Darden, not a single opponent presented arguments.

Although defeated, the bills were killed behind closed doors in an unrecorded 9-7 committee vote. In the Senate the poll-tax measure was killed by a 5-4 vote. Here was a chance for the great State of Virginia to assume the former status as the birthplace of liberty and democracy. However the rising tide of sentiment and support for human rights for all of its citizens evinces hope for a better brand of statesmanship.

Policing Vandalism

I wish to commend Major Barrett in his worthy efforts to control vandalism truancy and various other forms of juvenile delinquency among school-age children.

It has been brought to my attention that a trio of police officers have been experimentally and specially assigned to patrol and cruise the school areas and be on continuous call to the school buildings. I believe this patrol can aid in curbing the year-round molesting and other indignities that children have been suffering on their way to and from school and during recess time. In addition, I believe that the various loitering places and hangouts of truants can be identified and eliminated.

This city desperately needs that patrol now and during the warm spring days to come when delinquency is on the increase. I urge the Police Department to continue meeting this need by making the assignment a permanent one. CITIZEN.

Pope Pius' Degree

Kees Van Hoek's March 28 article, "Pope Pius XII—Priest and Statesman," declared that Cardinal Pacelli, while visiting Washington in 1936, received the degree of Dr. Honoris Causa from Catholic University.

Pope Pius XII, at that time Cardinal Pacelli, received the honorary degree from Georgetown University. As a Georgetown graduate, I personally lament this apparent loss of the university's most illustrious alumnus.

FBI Files

Would it help if law provided for authorized senatorial committees to have access, in confidence and under supervision, to the files of the FBI? And stipulate within such law that prosecution for violation of the confidential access be chargeable with heavy sentence against such committees or individual members which, or who, violated the confidence of their findings beyond the use of such findings for formulating decisions at closed hearings?

Wouldn't that satisfy both Capitol Hill and the FBI Director?

Pervert Blackmail

The complete unanimity of opinion expressed by Congress and press alike on the advisability of eliminating homosexuals from Government employment is reminiscent of Russian election returns. And, as in the Russian elections, this unanimity is, apparently, based upon fear of expressing an opposing opinion.

Just what will result from this latest witch-hunt? True, many homosexuals have been and will be fired and perhaps a few security risks will thereby be eliminated. If that were the only result, the end might conceivably justify the means. But not all homosexuals will be fired. Since they are usually rather secretive about their aberration, it is improbable that even a majority will be detected.

So now, the large number of homosexuals remaining in Government service become far worse security risks than ever before. They are worse security risks for the same reason that they were security risks in the first place—because they are subject to blackmail. Even suspicion of homosexuality will, it seems, be sufficient grounds for being fired from their jobs. Yes, the blackmailers have a much stronger weapon now; a weapon placed in their hands by those who would protect us from them.

"Struggle For Tax Reform"

The "punitive and discrimina-" tory" aspects attributed to excise taxes by Mr. Beardsley Ruml in his March 24 communication also apply to the tobacco and alcoholic beverage taxes, as well as to nearly all other taxes. If discrimination was his primary concern, Mr. Ruml should not have singled out certain excise taxes for special treatment without further justification. He urges the repeal of taxes that contributed over 3500 million dollars in revenue in 1949 and are estimated to contribute similar amounts in 1950 and 1951. How repeal of these taxes will result in a loss of only 1150 million dollars in Federal revenue is not quite clear.

Mr. Ruml states that the Committee for Economic Development "has shown how wartime excises can be repealed, and how, without any new sources of revenue and with only moderate reductions in projected expenditures, the budget will be balanced with high levels of productive employment and will show a surplus besides." As previously pointed out (January 17) CED's "balanced budget" was, among other things, predicated on the unlikely assumption of unemployment under 2.5 million. The present unemployed population is estimated at near five million, and there is speculation that unemployment will continue to increase.

Decreasing prices to increase sales may, under certain circumstances, be a shrewd business measure. However, the business of balancing the budget cannot be predicated on the assumption that by decreasing the Federal revenue the budget will be balanced.

Mr. Ruml, and others who feel inclined to encourage the repeal of certain taxes, should also advise how the lost revenue is to be replaced, or where expenditures are to be comparably curtailed. That tax reductions are desirable, when considered apart from the problems arising from such decreases in revenue, is not likely to be seriously questioned. However, when balanced against curtailment of defense and other unchallenged expenditures, or increases in the national debt, such reductions must be severely questioned.

I would like to take issue with Mr. Ruml's further recommendation that "the Federal deficit or surplus be measured by the cash-consolidated budget." Any business that employed an accounting system which failed—as does the cash-consolidated budget—to separate funds held in trust from the working capital would be inviting serious trouble. Such a system applied to the Federal Government will, by including in receipts, funds that should rightfully be held in trust for old age pensions, life insurance benefits, etc., show the budget balance to be deceitfully favorable and thereby encourage extravagancies. If social security and insurance premium rates have been properly set, income from these sources will have to be repaid in future years. If the rates are believed to be too high, they should be adjusted downward rather than confusing the overpayments with other receipts.

Matter of Fact

By Joseph Alsop

There's Very Little Time

FRANKFURT, GERMANY.—There is a very easy measure of the urgency of the situation here in Germany. The highest American policy-makers have already been solemnly and formally warned that they have only about 18 months to find a workable solution of the German problem.

The time available is so short because the present political health of Germany is precarious. If the Germans cannot soon be offered an acceptable future, poisons will again flood through German political life. The decent if uninspiring Bonn government will fail. Western Germany will surrender to the Soviet tactics of terror.

For these reasons, the wise and courageous American High Commissioner in Germany, John J. McCloy, has urged a solution that is bold, difficult, yet decisive. The new West German state must be fitted into a larger European union. Within this union, Western Germany must have a chance for peaceful political and economic development. Above all, as priority No. 1, a serious military defense of Western Germany and Western Europe must be organized forthwith.

McCLOY'S PRIMARY emphasis on defense reveals the danger of the Kremlin's new tactics of terror. To be sure, other dangers also confront Germany. French policy appears to be carefully calculated to transform this promising new Germany into a neurotic nation, filled with nationalist emotions and longings for revenge. The Adenauer government, which is no better than other governments, has adopted an alarmingly reckless approach to Western Germany's enormous economic problems.

Yet the basic danger here is the paralyzing sense of insecurity arising from the threat of Soviet power. You find this reaction in every German, from the Socialist worker who plans to emigrate to Australia because it is "furthest from the Russians," all the way to the big Dusseldorff industrialist who wonders whether he should try to save his skin and income by making deals with the East German puppet regime.

Even among the leaders of the Bonn government, there are the same doubts and fears. Chancellor Konrad Adenauer himself is reported to have said privately that if and when the Russians take over, he will receive them as the aged Roman senators received the Gauls, sitting stoically in his study, waiting for the inevitable end.

So long as this is the mood of the sanest and bravest Germans, all the many good things that have been accomplished in Germany since the war must be regarded as provisional and temporary. All can be lost by a single Western failure, such as a show of weakness at Berlin.

McCloy's proposal would give the Germans hope and confidence, and at the same time promise the development of a healthy Germany as part of the grand Western confederation. It has, indeed, only one drawback. It will demand greater American expenditures and more American effort, both to provide Western Europe with effective defenses, and to break the vicious circle of all previous discussion of European union. This vicious circle can be simply described. The French deeply and naturally fear Germany's potential superior power. Therefore they will join no European union in which Germany is not counterbalanced by Great Britain.

On the other hand, any European union will entail some relaxation of the economic controls of the member nations. In their present great economic peril, the British dare not relax their controls. To do so, they say with fundamental justice, would be to invite catastrophe. Thus the British will not join either, and no real European union is now possible.

WHAT IS NEEDED therefore, is not only a reversal of our current phony defense policy. What is needed also is an attack on the German problem via the British problem. Britain must be provided with a margin of economic safety, which will free her to play her proper role in Europe.

There are good reasons for saying that all this is well understood by the highest American policy-makers. These men know that survival is what is at stake in the German problem and in other similar problems. Indeed, the German problem, with its great urgency and heavy demands, must have been in the mind of Secretary of State Dean Acheson, when he said at Berkeley that this cold war was a war that could be lost without a battle being fought. It only remains to be seen whether the American Government as a whole will choose the hard road to survival, or will prefer the easier path so instructively charted by Stanley Baldwin.

Antidote To McCarthy

I want to tell you how helpful to spirits it is to go from the front page headlines to the editorial page of The Washington Post these days. I usually leave the front page very much discouraged. The other day, I left it in my mind composing a tedious memorandum to Senator McCarthy, referring him to the book, The Devil in Massachusetts, by Marion L. Starkey. But I turned to the editorial page and Mr. Block, with two words and a few deft strokes, had said what I was trying to phrase in my mind. Miss Lindsay's column, "National Danger" (March 22), made a worthy companion piece to the editorial.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The National Security

ON THE question of whether our defenses are "adequate" there are, despite endless variations in detail, three main views.

Lippmann

It is fair to identify them as (1) the Truman-Johnson, (2) the Eisenhower, and (3) the Symington - Finletter. All are agreed on the critical importance of American air power. The three views differ as to whether the Air Force is big enough.

In the last analysis they differ on how much new air power ought to be "procured"—that is to say ordered by the Air Force and manufactured by the aircraft industry each year. To make clear to ourselves what these differences are we have to adopt some common measure, and the best one is not money appropriated nor the number of planes, nor the number of "groups," but what aviation experts call "airframe weight." The reader does not need to try to understand just exactly what this technical term means: he can use it as the accepted measure of air power for this debate just as he accepts measures like horsepower, voltage, ship tonnage without knowing precisely what they are.

NOW in terms of "airframe weight" produced annually the Truman-Johnson program is about 24 million pounds for 1951. General Eisenhower—I believe this is correct—would like to see this raised to 31. The Symington-Finletter view is that it ought to be 86.

Thus the difference between the Truman-Johnson and the Eisenhower views is not nearly so great as the difference between their views and that of the Symington-Finletter school. In fact it may be said that the Truman-Johnson-Eisenhower views rest on the same strategic concept. The Symington-Finletter view, on the other hand, rests on a radically different strategic concept. To go up from 24 to 31, as General Eisenhower proposes, would be to sustain and improve the quality of the Air Force now decided upon. To go up from 31 to 86 would be to embark upon the creation of an altogether different type of Air Force.

WHAT is the difference? It is essentially whether the Air Force should be prepared (by 1953 or thereabouts) to wage a sustained campaign.

The Truman-Johnson-Eisenhower Air Force would presumably be able to deliver hard blows for—let us say—a three months' assault. Then it would be used up, and it would take perhaps 18 months before the aircraft industry could get into full production for a renewal of the assault. The Symington-Finletter Air Force would (after 1953) presumably be capable of carrying on the assault out of its own reserves without having to pause while the aircraft industry got into full production.

IN WEIGHING the two air power policies the financial burden, though serious, is not the controlling consideration. This country could afford the bigger Air Force far better than it could afford to be defeated in a war. The critical consideration is in the relative risks of the two policies.

The present and accepted policy offers the risk that if war breaks out, the initial assault may be insufficient to prevent Soviet mobilization and to protect American mobilization. But on the other hand, it has certain compensating advantages. The force, improved by the Eisenhower recommendations, should be sufficient to make aggression a very dangerous gamble. Though our force would not be adequate to knock out Russia, there is no certainty that the Symington-Finletter force would be able to knock out Russia. It should, however, be sufficient to deter any government from starting a war in which the chances were that the United States could not be knocked out.

THE EXISTING force, furthermore, is in truth the instrument of a defensive policy. The very fact that the Air Force is not large enough to wage a total continuous campaign, but only to strike hard retaliatory blows, is the objective proof that we are not preparing a preventive war. The Soviet propaganda may talk about warmongering. But the realists in the Kremlin, studying our actual forces, know that they are not the forces needed for a preventive war. Our forces, at the Eisenhower level, are deterrent but they are not provocative.

A decision to go up from the Eisenhower to the Symington-Finletter level would be one thing if the Air Force were in being the week after the money for it had been voted. It is quite another thing if two or three years must elapse before the bigger force exists. That interval between the decision to create the force and the actual creation of the force would be very critical. For we should have served notice on the Kremlin that by 1953 we shall be mobilized for total war. During the period when we were mobilizing —but were not yet mobilized— we could hardly count on the Soviet government's taking no measures of its own. At a minimum we should have to expect it to take measures to deny to the new Air Force the bases from which all but its biggest bombers could operate.

Thus the decision to go up to the Symington-Finletter level of air power would—in any prudent calculation—increase immediately the insecurity of Scandinavia, the Middle East, Germany and Japan.

THESE, I believe, are the fundamental considerations which have to be taken into account in judging this momentous question of military policy. The choice is not between security and insecurity. Neither policy offers complete security and neither policy is without grave risks.

But the risks of deciding and then announcing that we are preparing for total war by a certain date (1953) seem to me greater—considering the whole world situation—than the Eisenhower policy of maintaining what is in fact a defensive, deterrent, but not provocative, military establishment.

Fasting Pacifists Distribute Leaflets Protesting H-Bomb

The Washington Fast for Peace Committee, approximately 40 pacifists, yesterday distributed leaflets to worshipers outside eight churches of various denominations.

The leaflets, protesting "the preparations for hydrogen warfare," called on Christians to "refuse to support or take part in war."

The national group, sponsored by Peacemakers, New York Fellowship of Reconciliation, and the Catholic Worker, all of which have their headquarters in New York City, is holding a Holy Week fast to dramatize its cause.

Today the small delegation will go to the White House with a letter for President Truman "as the symbol of the American people," and will stage a poster march outside. The letter will ask the President to rescind the order to produce the H-bomb.

The group will hold open meetings at 8 p. m. daily, Thursday excepted, at its headquarters in Inspiration House, 1867 Kalorama rd. nw.

Know Your Waterways

What Mr. Hoover Believes

In 1925, when Secretary of Commerce, former President Herbert Hoover said in part in an address that "The topography of our country, the present and future necessities of our population, the development we have already accomplished and, above all, the goodness of Providence in our natural water channels, clearly define for us two major inland waterway systems, the Mississippi System and the Great Lakes System. I visualize the Mississippi System as 9,000 miles of connected waterways—a transportation system of which some 3,100 miles are trunk lines and 6,000 miles of laterals. That is, a main north-south trunk line 1,500 miles in length, reaching from New Orleans to Chicago and there connecting with the Great Lakes System and, crossing this, a great east-west trunk line 1,600 miles in length, from above Pittsburgh through Cairo to Kansas City. Over a large part of these main stems we can maintain nine feet of depth. In addition, we must diligently improve feeders through the Tennessee, Cumberland, Arkansas, Upper Missouri, Upper Mississippi, Monongahela, Allegheny and other streams to workable depth for modern craft . . . It will serve the vast heart of American agriculture and will place great commercial and industrial cities with upward of 7 million people in the cheapest of communications with each other and cheapen transportation of agricultural and bulk commodities over a great hinterland of states . . . Diesel engines, improved steam appliances, and better loading and discharging devices, have all advanced us a long distance from the old canal boats and the packet boat. But the fundamental for use of these appliances is that we shall have sufficient and reliable depths of water to make them possible for use . . . Modern forms of development have made water carriage the cheapest of all transportation for many types of goods . . . With greater depths and with the improvements in craft, it is possible to restore our waterways. Nor will this jeopardize the prosperity of our railways, as some predict." What Mr. Hoover believes to be good for the general welfare is a far cry from the clamor of those interests opposed to waterway competition.

over failure of Congress to enact the civil rights program.

A separate civil liberties resolution urged appointment of a presidential non-partisan commission to investigate operation of the loyalty programs, congressional attacks, and unlawful activities of investigative agencies which threaten civil liberties.

Other resolutions approved urged President Truman to veto the Kerr bill exempting independent natural gas producers from Federal regulation and called on Congress to repeal the ban on the closed shop and hiring hall practices.

Splits on Lodge Amendment

The convention split on the Senate-approved Lodge amendment to abolish the electoral college and apportion the electoral vote in accordance with the popular vote. It came out for direct election of the President by popular vote and said it favored the Lodge amendment as a step in this direction, but only if it includes the so-called Case amendment.

The latter amendment, ADA said, would make a State's electoral strength "a true reflection of the popular vote and prevent the gross disproportion as between States" which it said was inherent in the Lodge proposal.

Walter P. Reuther, president of the CIO United Auto Workers, brought the convention to its feet with a rousing informal talk. He said the United States is living in its "greatest hour of crisis"—in a "twilight period where there is neither peace nor war, neither prosperity nor depression."

Sees Moral Vacuum

He said the hydrogen bomb created a serious political and moral vacuum in the world which must be filled with a vigorous program of social action so the cold war can be turned into a practical program of peace.

"We can sell democracy only by tangible achievement," Reuther said. "We've got to answer the Cominform with a positive program of social action and economic justice, not pious promises."

Reuther urged a united labor movement, saying nothing would disappoint the Cominform more than to bring this about. He said he saw the CIO and AFL work together in London on international labor problems and it was time they "rise above petty things" and work together at home.

this week at a session of the Senate Republican Policy Committee, which may decide to make the dispute a mater of party policy. Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), policy committee chairman, announced last week that the group was discussing the problem and probably would take definite action either today or at its regular Thursday meeting.

Senator McCarthy, receiving treatment for sinus at the United States Naval Hospital, Bethesda, Md., announced yesterday that he will hold a press conference today at the institution. His office said it would be "important."

The Wisconsin Senator, who expects to be released from the hospital tonight after undergoing minor surgery, declined to discuss the subject of the press conference.

Told to Hush Up Hospital Hazard, Fire Marshal Says

Philadelphia, April 2 (AP).—A township fire marshal declared today that "certain political figures" cautioned him to keep silent after he found fire hazards last January at the Belle Vista sanatorium where a fire Wednesday killed 10 people.

Springfield Township Fire Marshal Reeves H. Dengler added that the operator of the private hospital, Roland L. Randal, was "abusive and uncooperative" when recommendations were made to correct what Dengler called dangerous conditions.

An inmate of the sanatorium, Nicholas Verna, 28, was charged yesterday with murder and arson. Police quoted him as saying he set the fire because of "a sick feeling in the pit of my stomach."

Randal denied Dengler's charges.

The State Department of Welfare announced plans to obtain any evidence Dengler holds.

Jap Bank Robber Armed With Sword Cuts Throats of 6

Tokyo, April 2 (AP).—A bank robber murdered six persons with a sword after looting the Mifuka Bank of Hokkaido of 800,000 yen (about $2200) early today, the newspaper Asami reported.

The paper gave this account of the bizarre crime:

The robber broke into the bank and forced a watchman to take him to an official's home. At sword point he made the official and his wife accompany him to the bank and open the vault.

Then he took the couple to another official's home, made the two bankers and their wives and two small children lie on the floor, and gave them knockout hypodermics. When they were groggy, he calmly slashed their throats.

Two frightened servant girls called police after the robber had left.

Passover began at sundown Saturday night. For Orthodox and Conservative Jews it will end at sundown on April 9. For Reform Jews it ends at sundown on April 8.

At Washington Highlands Jewish center, Rabbi Morris Pockholz declared that Passover expresses the "highest ideal of human liberty—the idea of freedom of the individual."

Rabbi Harry J. Kaufman, speaking at Beth Sholom Congregation, said that "freedom is to be the heritage of all, not any few in the land nor any group in any class, but all the inhibitants."

With Shirley Povich

ORLANDO, FLA., APRIL 2.—Grapefruit League culls: The complaint by Marty Marion of the Cardinals, chairman of the National League players' committee, against big bonuses to high school kids, left President Frank McKinney of the Pirates quite unperturbed.

POVICH

Marion declared that when the Pirates paid young Paul Pettit $100,000 to get his name on a contract, "it cost every veteran player of the Pirates about $4000 apiece."

McKinney observed that Marty, while a good shortstop, didn't know anything about business management.

"Does he think," the Pirates' president inquired, "that if we hadn't signed Pettit we'd have given each of our players a $4000 raise?"

THE BALL PLAYERS may resent the hefty bonus payments to kids who have not yet made good, but they have no feeling against such as Ted Williams ($125,000 a year); Joe DiMaggio ($100,000) and such as Ralph Kiner and Stan Musial and Bob Feller who also are in the sky-high brackets.

The more the likes of Williams and DiMag make, the better bargaining position it is for the average player, with salaries being relative. Thus two generations of players have been taught that Babe Ruth's fabulous salaries were the biggest factor in raising the pay-scale of all of them.

In fact they joke about the big dough of the big-shot stars. At least Jimmy Bloodworth, the former Nat now with the Reds, reacted with a sense of humor when he noted DiMaggio and Musial playing gin rummy the other day at St. Pete.

As Bloodworth walked away from their card game, a baseball writer asked him "how much are those two playing for? Said Bloodworth, "Those two are probably playing for Cadillacs."

FOR A COUPLE of weeks, Ralph Kiner and General Manager Fred Hamey of the Pirates were stymied on the subject of Kiner's 1950 salary. He was demanding $70,000, against an offer of $60,000.

The negotiations went on while the pair of 'em were playing $5 Nassau golf with club President McKinney, and Dr. Allen Tannie, of New York. Tannie, the Nation's No. 1 Pirate fan, was their host, and an excellent one. Kiner finally signed, Hamey declared "for $65,000 and the golf rights to Dr. Tannie."

MICKEY GRASSO, the Nats' fiery catcher who is on the spot with American League umpires because of his umpire-baiting reputation in the Coast League, has announced to them individually that he will be well-behaved this season.

Umpire Ed Hurley took him at his word, and even listened calmly the other day when Grasso held up the game to argue about a called ball with Ray Scarborough pitching. It wasn't a hot argument, so Hurley finally cut him off with a word of advice:

"Listen, rookie," he told Grasso. "In this league, don't ever turn around and argue with the umpire. It makes us look bad. If you have anything to say, say it with your back to us.

"That way, you can almost get away with murder."

LUKE SEWELL, who is managing the Grapefruit League champions, the Cincinnati Reds, likes the whole idea of watching his club finish in front. But he is not being beguiled by their successes in Florida.

When they came into Orlando the other day with 13 victories to show for their 18 jousts with major league clubs in Florida, Sewell admitted "we're going pretty good." And then he added realistically. "I'd swap all of these victories for one nice 11-9 win in mid-July."

TAFT WRIGHT, the former Nat who was traded to the White Sox several years back, and wound up his big league career with the A's last season, is now in the outfield of the Louisville Colonels. And making more money, at least this year, than he ever did in the majors.

He got a $10,000 bonus for signing, plus an $8000 salary at Louisville. They didn't sign him for his fielding, for stout Taffy was never one of the good outfielders, as Lefty Gomez noted a decade ago.

A Washington pitcher breezed two strikes past Gomez, who then popped a short fly into right field. Wright broke the wrong way, finally sensed his mistake, and then succeeded in dashing too far in. The ball dropped behind him for a cheap two-bagger.

Gomez turned to Second Baseman Buddy Myer and commented: "That's my strategy—take two and hit to Wright."

'Experts' Talk It Over

Marion, Reese, Henrich—Which Would Be Your Pilot?

By Jack Hand

St. Petersburg, Fla., April 2 (AP).—Suppose you own a ball club. You want to pick a manager from today's big league ball players. Whom do you take?

The question came up the other day at Al Lang Field after an exhibition game. A club owner, a big league manager, a radio announcer, an author and a sports writer were shooting the breeze.

"I'd take Marty Marion," said the radio announcer, "He's the intelligent type. Still he's strong enough to speak out when needed. He gets along with the public fine, too."

"Put me down for Tommy Henrich," the sports writer offered. "He's a fine influence on the Yankee club. Smart and a natural leader.

"In these days, there's much more to managing than just playing a ball game. You have to represent the club at luncheons and banquets. You have to appear on the radio and must get along with the press. A fellow has to be a public-relations expert. I think Henrich is the type."

The author had listened in silence. He made no suggestions. Finally he spoke up.

"I've been watching ball games and ball clubs for 35 years," he said, "and I've seen some awfully dumb fellows win pennants as big-league managers. Maybe the manager isn't so important."

It was the owner's turn. He had a man all picked out.

"Pee Wee Reese is my man," he said. "I wouldn't be surprised he might be in line for the Brooklyn job one of these years. Although I know Branch Rickey often has said he wouldn't want a manager who hadn't been tried out in the minor leagues.

The big-league manager listened while somebody else presented the Boston Red Sox' Birdie Tebbetts as a candidate. He nodded agreement.

Funny thing. Nobody mentioned Joe DiMaggio, Ted Williams, Stan Musial, Bobby Feller, Hal Newhouser or the other big-name players of the day. But then no manager yet ever got $125,000 a year.

Tony Galento Floored Twice By 'Teddy' Bear

Asbury Park, N. J., April 2 (AP).—Tony Galento, onetime heavyweight boxing contender, "boxed" three rounds with Teddy, a 550-pound bear, last night and was knocked down twice.

Galento, who trained down to around 250 for the big bout, wasn't quick enough to avoid two right hand swings from the 23-year-old animal and hit the canvas for counts of six and seven in the second round.

The bear wore a muzzle and regular boxing gloves. Galento wore a ferocious grimace.

Robinson, Coan, Kozar, Vollmer Hit For Circuit

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Orlando, April 2. — The Nats found some pitching to their liking today—their own and Louisville's—and negotiated a very satisfactory 12-3 victory over the Red Sox Triple-A farmhand at Tinker Field.

The pitching that most impressed Bucky Harris was the four shut-out innings delivered by Steve Nagy in his debut in a Washington uniform. Nagy, after five weeks of tender conditioning, breezed past his first test.

The Nats looked like sure-hot winners of the American Association pennant, at least. They batted a pair of Louisville right-handers named Mike Palm and Jack Robinson for 17 hits in their deadliest batting display of the spring.

Against the unhappy Robinson, who pitched the last five innings, the Nats showed their muscles. Eddie Robinson hit a home run over the rightfield wall, Al Kozar hit a home run over the leftfield wall, Gil Coan homered over the rightfield wall and Clyde Vollmer hit the daddy of 'em all over the barrier in left-center.

And Eddie Stewart was denied an inside-the-park homer when Coach George Myatt held him up at third base in the ninth to save wear and tear on Stewart's dogs.

It was a great day for two of the Coast Leaguers Harris brought up to the Nats—Nagy, and little George Genovese, the underslung shortstop who gave the 800 fans a fancy fielding show and nailed down a utility job for himself with the Nats.

Nagy Shows 'em

Nagy was curve-balling the Colonels and getting it over the plate with consistency. He allowed three hits in his four-inning stint, but two of those were fuzzy infield taps, and he walked nobody, and nobody got past second base.

Little Genovese rapped out three hits for himself, and virtually took charge of the Nats' infield defense. He started two double plays, was the middle man in clicking off a third, and twice he went into short center field for dazzling back-to-the plate catches of trouble pregnant pop flies.

Louisville got its four runs after Dick Welteroth replaced Nagy.

They rapped him for six hits in five innings, but one of their runs was unearned, and he woud up with a sort of a flourish by shoving a third strike past George Wilson with the bases full in the ninth.

The Nats recognized Right Hander Palm as the same guy they pounded at Sarasota 10 days ago when he was working for the Red Sox. They whacked him for nine hits and four runs in the four innings he pitched.

But they were only warming up for the appearance of Jack Robinson. Quicker than you can say Jack Robinson, Eddie Robinson led off the seventh with his homer over the right field wall. A bit later, Al Kozar lined his out of the park in the opposite direction.

Gil Coan got into the home run act with his smash leading off the eighth, and it began to burgeon as a five-run inning when Genovese followed with a single. That was the spot Vollmer picked to blast the day's most prodigious poke over the left center signboards, the longest shot of the season at Tinker Field.

IN SHORT . . . Clark Griffith has been wondering why Harris recommended the drafting of Genovese for $10,000 from the Coast League. Today he saw the little guy play shortstop like a combination of Wagner-Boudreau-Peckinpaugh . . . Eddie Robinson's lone hit of the day was his seventh-inning homer, which he would have liked to break up into four singles. His batting average nosedived all the way to .448. The Nats dip into Triple A competition again tomorrow at Haines City, where they play the Springfield (Mass.) club of the International League, transplanted from Newark.

'Why Not Skoits?'

Dodger Fans in Dither as Rickey Ponders Shorts for Bums Similar to Farm Team's

New York, April 2 (U.P.).—Cries of woe echoed along Gowanus Canal in the heart of Brooklyn today, as word got around that 'dem bums, the Brooklyn Dodgers, might someday play baseball in shorts.

"Goils play, strikkly goils play," Flatbush fans lamented.

"Why not skoits?" demanded Sol La Salle. "Can't ya just see 'dem Bums in skoits?"

"Ya can tell Branch Rickey fa' me he better keep dat idea outta Ebbets Field unless he hires goils," declared Frederick J. Michael.

Da boys—er—the boys—were getting so hot under the collar because Dodger Owner Branch Rickey put his seal of approval on the Hollywood farm team which took to the field in shorts.

Rickey said he liked the new togs so well, he might put them on the Dodgers, too.

La Salle, a bartender, said he gets a big laugh thinking about the Dodgers running around in shorts like tennis player Gussie Moran's, only HERS are trimmed with lace.

"Oy can see some a dose bony-kneed characters," he declared. "They'd get booed right off da dymond."

"Ever see a boxer woik in long payunts?" asked Ray Jaillet. "Take away da baggy pants an ya hoit baseball."

Dan Riley said he'd been following the Dodgers for 20 years. It's either the greatest girls' softball team or the greatest baseball team in the National League, he said, and it's up to Rickey to decide which—and right now.

"In shoits, I won't like 'em," he declared.

"It should happen to Brooklyn," said Budd O'Hara. "Everything happens in Brooklyn."

"Shoits on women—okay," declared John Mavvucco. "If Rickey gets a dame shoitstop, okay. But not a Peewee Reese fa' gosh sakes."

Frank Sullivan, manager of one of Brooklyn's finest watering places, expressed his doubts, too, about abandoning knickers.

"In baseball, ya gotta slide, Kelly, slide," he said. "In shoits yuh might hoit ya'self. The Bums are tough, but not that tough."

Harrison's 280 Beats Out Fazio by Two Strokes

Middlecoff, Kirkwood Tie for Third

Wilmington, N. C., April 2 (AP). E. J. (Dutch) Harrison, the Arkansas traveler, who plays out of St. Andrews, Ill., pulled himself together on the back nine today to post a one-under par 71, and won the Wilmington Open golf tournament with a 72-hole score of 280.

Second with 73 today for 282 was George Fazio of Woodmont Country Club Washington. Fazio matched Harrison's outgoing 37, but could do no better than par coming back. He came to the last three holes needing three birdies for a tie. He got one on the short 16th, but had to settle for pars on 17 and 18.

Victory in the $10,000 tournament was worth $2,000 to Harrison and shot him up from 15th to ninth on the year's money list with $3894. Fazio's $1400 pickup boosted him to $4868 and seventh place.

Harrison, whose last victory was in the Canadian Open last summer, posted rounds of 68-72-69-71 to finish eight under par for the 6652-yard Cape Fear Country Club course.

Three strokes out of first place with 283 came National Open Champion Cary Middlecoff of Ormond Beach, Fla., and Joe Kirkwood, jr., Hollywood's Joe Palooka. Middlecoff had a 33 finish after a rocky 39 start, while Kirkwood turned in a 70. Their third-place tie enabled them to pick up $900 apiece.

The best score of the day was a 67 by Johnny Palmer, Badin, N. C. It gave him a three-way tie for tenth at 287. He was out in 35 and back in 32.

Fazio opened with a birdie but slid over par on three and four and never could get back on the track. Four fives on the first six holes rounding the turn put him in a spot where he needed a three-birdie finish to win, and he just didn't have the shots to turn the trick. It was his second runnerup finish in two weeks. Middlecoff beat him by two strokes at Jacksonville two weeks ago.

Weak-Hitting GW Uses Nats' Bats

WEAM to Carry Dodgers On 'Game of Day'

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

GEORGE WASHINGTON'S baseball team has made only eight hits in its first two games, but the players aren't entirely to blame. The bats they are using were used by last year's Nats . . . Fred Scolari's feat of leading the Caps in scoring (860 points) is quite remarkable. The bouncy little push-shot star is blind in his left eye and did most of his scoring from the right-hand side of the court . . . Navy's 1950 football team may not play like pros, but they'll be dressed like 'em anyway. Coach Eddie Erdelatz plans to scrap the somber colors, rigging his squad in bright new uniforms which will include stockings . . . Pitcher Johnny Klipstein, the Washington boy the Chicago Cubs drafted from the Brooklyn-owned Montreal farm, is the subject of lavish notices by Chicago baseball writers. "He could very easily prove to be the most important draft choice the Cubs have made since Hack Wilson," one reporter wrote . . .

ED ERDELATZ

EXCLUDED, along with all other area stations, from the Mutual Broadcasting System's "American League Game of the Day," WEAM in Arlington has switched to the National League and a telegraphic account of the Brooklyn Dodgers' games . . . Seeking sponsors to defray the $350 per game cost, WEAM hopes to air 100 Dodger contests this season . . . WEAM's Dodger broadcasts will not conflict with broadcasts of the Nats' games . . . Johnny Poston, coach of the Garvin's Grill girl's softball team (what a job!), issues a challenge to the newly-formed Pin-Up Girls Softballers . . . "My girls challenge them in both athletic ability and charm," Poston writes . . . Johnny Idzik, senior halfback at Maryland, was on the verge of quitting the team unless Coach Jim Tatum permitted him to try out for quarterback this spring. Tatum granted the request and now Idzik is the No. 1 signal-caller . . .

SEVENTEEN POUNDS underweight and looking every ounce of it, Red Auerbach, Tri-City Blackhawks' coach, is ready to quit coaching pro basketball and accept a college coaching berth . . . Redskin uniform No. 35, worn for years by Halfback Wilbur Moore and retired when Moore retired, will be worn by Bill Dudley next season. It's the same number Dudley has worn throughout high school, college and pro football career . . . Charlie Justice is due at Redskin offices April 22 either to reiterate he won't play pro football or fall under spell of George Marshall and ink a Tribal pact . . . When Tommy O'Keefe ventured out on the Georgetown basketball court to practice for the East-West game recently, he found about 40 students using the Ryan gymnasium facilities and retired to his dormitory room to practice upon the suggestion of a mathematical-minded fellow student. The figure filbert figured out that cramped Ryan gym, with 40 students on it, would permit O'Keefe only 90 square feet to cavort in while he could enjoy nearly 288 square feet in his dorm room.

Brothers, Williams Meet Tonight

Vernon Williams of Philadelphia fights Elkins Brothers, District heavyweight, in a scheduled 10-rounder at Turner's Arena tonight.

Brothers is rated a slight favorite but Wiliams has a good record of 19 wins in 23 fights, including victories over Billy Fox and Sipio Lofton.

Brothers will be out to make a good showing tonight to enhance his chances of getting some outdoor fights here this summer.

He has a chance at a bout with Joey Maxim at Griffith Stadium June 12, if he goes good against Williams.

Brothers has won 24 out of 27 starts against three losses and one draw.

Billy Coffey Wilkinson, local featherweight who made an impressive debut several weeks ago by putting the chill on Puggy King, makes his second appearance tonight in a five-rounder against Red Gaddis.

Another five-rounder brings together Johnny Holt and Harvey Jones, light heavies, while a trio of four-rounders list Tex Newby vs. Scott Richardson, middleweights; Bobby Busick vs. Frank Ball, lightweight, and Jimmy O'Brien vs. Ralph Brown, welters.

PGA Holds 'Showdown' Talks Today

Wilmington, N. C., April 2 (AP).—Two of the principals in tomorrow's "showdown" meeting of Professional Golfers Association of America officials left here today for PGA headquarters in Chicago, scene of the meeting.

George Schneiter, PGA tournament bureau manager, and Horton Smith, PGA secretary, will meet tomorrow with President Joe Novak and other PGA officials to discuss the plan whereby the top tournament players would set up their own division of the PGA.

Schneiter, who will speak for the players, said today, "This thing is not as dramatic as it may seem from reading the papers." He added that he believed a solution would be found, if not at Chicago, at subsequent meetings.

Schneiter has said that the pros do not seek to break away from the main PGA body, but simply want the authority to run tournaments and conduct their own affairs while remaining in the organization.

Laurel Hits Homestretch This Week

Laurel, Md., April 2.—Five more days of sport remain before Laurel race course rings down the curtain on the first spring meeting in its history.

No more stakes are scheduled, but there will be a variety of overnight features which should attract some of the better performers on the grounds. Many of these features will furnish trainers with excellent spots in which to test stake horses for future engagements at Havre de Grace and Pimlico later on.

Sprinters will headline tomorrow's card when the 6-furlong Silver Spring is listed. For Tuesday's card, Racing Secretary Charles J. McLennan has scheduled the Takoma Park Handicap at 6 furlongs and the Cabinet, over the 6-furlong distance.

Three-year-old fillies will meet Wednesday in the Anacostia, at three-quarters of a mile, and the same day seasoned sprinters clash in the Bethesda. The Ambassador, for 3-year-old, and the Jefferson, for older horses, make up Thursday's attractions, both at 6 furlongs.

For the final day, Friday, the Cherry Blossom Handicap, at a mile and a sixteenth, is the top race, supported by the Rock Creek for fillies and mares over the sprinting distance.

Maryland's racing will shift to Havre de Grace on Saturday where a 16-day meeting begins. The Chesapeake Trial, a six-furlong dash worth $7500 added is down for decision on opening day and a total of 46 sophomores are eligible. Charles Town also opens Saturday for an 18-day session.

At Laurel

Dear Folks:

Your host, the West Coast sensation and Kentucky Derby candidate, has four white feet which is enough to scare off many superstitious Eastern bettors who are allergic to a horse thus colored.

Bob Considine has a 2-year-old named for him by his old Stanton Park friend, Joe Tucci. The latest rags-to-riches horse is R. R. McClarin's Abbottstown. Last October he ran in $2500 claiming company and won at Garden State. He moved to the $3250 ranks at the same track and won. He came down to Pimlico and won for $3500. First out this year at Laurel, he won for $7500, coming back Saturday to win for $10,000 in 1:11, the fastest 6 furlongs up to that point of the meeting. —BILL.

WITH THIS NEW PROTECTION

FOR YOU AND YOUR FAMILY!

EMBASSY DAIRY

proudly introduces

GERM-PROOF PURE ALUMINUM BOTTLE HOODS

Starting Tuesday · On all our bottles... No extra cost to you!

Safeguarding the purity of your family's milk always has been — and always will be — Embassy's first concern.

Now, with the help of modern dairy science and the research and development laboratories of Aluminum Company of America, we add another first to our record for spotless, sanitary, friendly, courteous, efficient service.

FIRST REAL PROTECTION AGAINST FINGER BACTERIA

No matter how hard or how often you scrub them, you can never completely remove "finger bacteria" from your hands. For the most part harmless, these bacteria might very easily become dangerous, disease-bearing germs. The milk bottles in your refrigerator should be protected against the possible dangers of "finger bacteria."

Embassy's new Aluminum Protective Hood does gives positive protection against "finger bacteria." First, it is made of non-organic material. Then, there is no "tab" for which you must probe with your fingernails. To remove the new Embassy Hood, you simply twist and lift. Neither your finger nor the heel or Palm of your hand need ever touch the lip of your Embassy Milk Bottle . . . and thus your entire family is positively protected against "finger bacteria!"

HERE'S HOW EMBASSY'S NEW PURE ALUMINUM TOP GUARDS YOUR FAMILY'S HEALTH

1. Seals Out Dirt and Germs — Made as needed from pure, sterilized Alcoa Aluminum — right in our own dairy. Embassy's new milk hood seals securely . . . keeps out dirt, germs, moisture.
2. Protects Dairy-Fresh Flavor — Pure aluminum — all the way through — our new hood can neither absorb nor impart foreign flavors or odors to fresh, pure Embassy Dairy products.
3. Easy to Open — A Perfect Reclosure — This modern Embassy aluminum hood comes off with magic ease — serves as a protective reclosure for storing partially used bottles.
4. Moisture-Proof — Will Not Get Soggy — Sparkling Embassy hoods of Alcoa Aluminum will not absorb moisture — they stay fresh, clean, pleasant to use, after the bottle is opened.
5. Guards Complete Pouring Area — Fingers need never touch the pouring edge of the bottle protected by Embassy's sparkling aluminum hood. Your milk pours pure . . . down to the last, delicious drop.
6. Approved by Health Authorities — Leading health authorities, doctors, schools, hospitals, recognize the superiority of these sanitary hoods. Only Embassy in Washington brings them to you — in pure Alcoa Aluminum.

New convenience for you too!

EASY TO REMOVE . . . EASY TO PUT BACK ON, TOO!

Our new hoods of Alcoa Aluminum are easier to remove . . . to put back on. No tools are needed. Just grasp hood firmly — turn to loosen — lift off gently. Use as reclosure for refrigerator storage until the last drop is consumed.

Ask for the bottle with the s-p-a-r-k-l-i-n-g aluminum hood . . . at your favorite food store, from your neighborhood Embassy driver.

Always look for the respected Embassy label . . . now, more than ever, your guide to the purest — the best — in dairy products.

New York Educator Reported Top Choice To Succeed Voorhees as Army Undersecretary

KENNETH D. JOHNSON, a New York educator-lawyer, is a good bet to be appointed Army Undersecretary. He is the choice of several of the President's top advisers.

Johnson

Johnson left Government a year ago to become dean of Columbia University's School of Social Work. He had been general counsel of the National Security Resources Board, and before that, special assistant to the Army Secretary and an Army colonel during the war.

At one time Johnson was the White House choice to head the NSRB. At Army, he will replace Tracy S. Voorhees as Undersecretary, and serve under Secretary Frank Pace. While he was in the Army Department, Johnson helped to draft the President's Federal employe loyalty program.

STORY: One of the many questions on a standard Civil Service job application form is: "Have you ever been arrested, or summoned into court as a defendant, or indicted?" A young lady wrote in this answer to the embarrassing question to some people: "Sued by boy friend for return of engagement ring."

LOYALTY: Two new members have been appointed to the President's Loyalty Review Board. They are: Dr. Leonard D. White, a professor in public administration at the University of Chicago, and a former GOP member of the Civil Service Commission, and Brunson MacChesney, a professor of law at Northwestern University. MacChesney has served with several Federal agencies here. Both men served on the regional loyalty board in Chicago.

JOB NEWS: Civil Service will announce exams soon to fill these jobs: clinical psychologist, $5400 to $10,000 starting salaries; valuation engineer, $8800; nursing consultant, $4600 to $7600; a dozen different types of supply jobs such as general supply, storekeeping and storage, property and stock control, surplus property disposal, and supply cataloging. The supply jobs pay from $3100 to $6400 to start.

Civil Service has ordered the firing by July 31 of nonstatus employes here and nearby in these jobs: medical and X-ray technician, $2450 to $3450 salaries; dental officer, $4600 to $7600, and physiologist, $3825 to $10,000 . . . At the Navy's Bethesda Medical Center, tests are open for hospital attendant, $2650, and housekeeper, $8 to $8.96 a day . . . At Bolling and Andrews Air Force Bases, tests are open for carpenter, parachute and clothing repairer, aircraft servicing electrician, painter, high lift and fork operator, custodial laborer, artist illustrator, and auto upholsterer.

PLAN 18: It's official now: Federal workers, who would be shifted under the President's reorganization Plan 18 wouldn't get pay cuts because of it. Civil Service Commission has amended its salary regulations to prevent any salary slashes.

The Civil Service order, however, would protect incumbent employes only. As new employes are brought in, they would be started at the lower Classification Act salaries. Plan 18 would transfer Federal buildings from the Postoffice Department to the new General Services Administration. Postal salaries for custodial employes are higher than those allowed under the Classification Act.

RECOGNITION: Three Civil Service officials have been cited for their outstanding work in restoring veterans to Federal jobs. They were: Charles R. Anderson, Bruce Stubblefield and McKinnon Carmichael. The awards were made by Gen. Lewis B. Hershey of the Selective Service System.

LEAVE: Three members of Congress are reported to be drafting bills to place annual leave on a graduated basis, depending on years of service. One of the bills would propose: 15 days for employes up to 10 years of service; 20 days up to 15 years, and 25 days for all service over 15 years.

Foster Home Post Taken By Mrs. Mack

A new full-time social worker has been taken on by the Children's Protective Association to tackle the ever present problem—acute shortage of foster homes.

Mrs. Mack

She is Mrs. Blanche R. Mack of 5466 30th st. nw., a graduate of Chicago University's School of Social Service Administration.

Her work, which starts today, will be to contact church groups, P-TA's and other organizations, asking them to inform their members of the dire need for foster homes. She will also screen applications by those willing to undertake foster care of children.

The C. P. A., a Community Chest member, tried to find substitute parents for both Negro and white children who are referred to the agency by schools, the Juvenile Court and other welfare agencies. Often it receives unwanted babies directly from the hospitals in which they were born. Children range in age from 5 days to 16 years.

"We are mostly in search of parents who have an unselfish desire to care for these children. We look for affection and warmth in them more than anything else," Mrs. Mack said yesterday, when asked about qualifications for foster parents. She added the foster parents cannot be in financial stress nor can they have serious health problems.

Foster parents are paid $45 a month to board an infant under 3 years of age and $40 a month for an older child. This payment is to cover food, laundry, toilet articles, household expenses and transportation. All other expenses are covered by the agency.

Mrs. Mack came to Washington about a year and a half ago with her husband, Robert Mack, who works in the Office of Alien Property, Department of Justice.

Two men were injured critically last night when a Montgomery Cab Co. taxicab left the road and overturned in the 600 block of River rd. near Wilson la., Bethesda, Md., after it hit a tree and knocked down two mailboxes. The car was demolished.

Randall J. Nichols, 39, the driver, of 4600 Langdrum la., Bethesda, had a lacerated face and elbow, his left ear was torn off, and he suffered possible internal injuries and a fractured skull.

John E. Lynch, 36, a passenger, 1718 Newton st. nw., suffered a lacerated face and shoulder, chest injuries and possible rib fractures.

Both were taken to Suburban Hospital, Bethesda, by Bethesda-Chevy Chase Rescue Squad.

A Park Police private escaped injury yesterday when his car was forced off the road by another and overturned in a sewer excavation.

He is Pvt. Charles E. Gwyn, 28, of Glen Echo, Md. He told Metropolitan Police he was off duty, at 5 a. m., and driving along Calan rd., near Foxhall rd. He said a green car, bearing Maryland tags, came in the opposite direction, on the wrong side of the street.

To avoid a collision, he said, he ran off the street. Before he could stop, he said, his auto fell. A police search for the other auto was fruitless.

Three-Car Accident

Horace M. Coats, 53, administrative assistant to Sen. William E. Jenner (R., Ind.), forfeited $25 collateral yesterday on a charge of passing a red light, after he was involved in a three-car accident.

Police said Coats, who lives at 9004 Manchester rd., Silver Spring, passed the light on Georgia ave. and Rittenhouse st., nw. His auto first struck one driven by Billy Cornett, 22, of 2718 S. Wayne st., Arlington, police said, glanced off, and struck one driven by Mabel Walter, 46, of 7361 Fort Foote rd., Fort Foote, Md. The latter car, police said, was waiting for the light to change.

Truck-Taxi Crash

Two persons, injured Saturday night in a truck-taxicab crash in which a woman was killed, were reported in fair condition yesterday at Casualty Hospital.

Thomas Greville, 40, of 613 Pennsylvania ave. se., suffered a possible skull fracture. He was a passenger in the cab with Miss Josephine Hebard, 28, of 2519 Congress st. se., who died shortly afterward.

James J. Shelton, 39, 3611 Warder st. nw., driver of the cab, suffered a possible fractured back.

George A. Branch, 27, of 716 55th st. ne., driver of the truck, was still in jail yesterday. Dr. Christopher J. Murphy, deputy District coroner, said he had asked $1000 bond on Branch for appearance at an inquest into Miss Hebard's death.

In addition, Branch will go to Municipal Court today on charges of driving while drunk, leaving the scene of an accident, and passing a red light. The crash occurred at 4th st. and Independence ave. sw., when, police said, Branch drove his truck through a red stop light and crashed into the side of the cab.

'Fast Timers' Take Clear Lead in Poll

Daylight saving time appeared yesterday to have a clear lead—as much as 4 to 1 in some precincts—in District voting on the question, with some 40,000 of the 200,000 ballots collected.

As an example of the trend, the Tenth Precinct reported 22,000 ballots collected and a 3 to 1 lead so far. The Thirteenth Precinct reported that of 6817 ballots, 4376 were in favor of daylight saving, while 1786 didn't want it and 655 registering "don't care" votes.

The House District Committee at 10:30 a. m. today is scheduled to take up the "fast time" bill. House District leaders said they would not table discussion pending outcome of the balloting. The bill would be effective for this summer only.

In the Senate, a bill to give Washington permanent summer daylight saving awaits floor action.

Precinct by precinct, here's how the ballots were coming in yesterday:

No. 1—Collections to be made today and Tuesday; No. 2—Undetermined number of ballots in, showing 80 percent in favor; No. 3—Several thousands in, "very much in favor;" No. 4—Few hundred collected with major collection slated for today, but checks show most ballots in favor; No. 5—1000 in, "most of them for;" No. 6—3000 in, showing 3 to 1 in favor; No. 7—Few collected; No. 8—800 in, showing 4 to 1 in favor; No. 9—3000 collected, majority for fast time; No. 10—22,000 collected, 3 to 1 in favor; No. 11—Pickups will be made today and Tuesday; No. 12—Several hundred collected, large majority in favor; No. 13—Breakdown of 6817 ballots shows 4376 in favor, 1786 opposed and 655 "don't care;" No. 14—Several thousand collected, "overwhelmingly" in favor.

Jackson Honors Lawgivers At Ceremony in Cathedral

Supreme Court Justice Robert H. Jackson spoke yesterday at dedication ceremonies for new law and education windows at the Washington Cathedral.

He paid tribute to the three great lawgivers of history pictured in the law window—Alfred the Great, Justinian and Moses.

The Sanherdrin, highest of the Hebrew courts, was in many ways far in advance of its time, he said. The court, he said, "deserves a better name than it has among Christians" who think of it only in connection with the crucifixion of Christ.

"It was not the last court to blunder under public pressure," Jackson declared.

The two windows, he said, are a reminder of "our heritage of truth which is law and of law which is truth."

Gas Attendant Burned to Death In Room Fire

Body Discovered In Closet; Blaze Is Confined to Bed and Mattress

John B. Thomas, 43, was burned to death early yesterday morning at 1709 21st st. nw., where he roomed. Dr. Christopher J. Murphy, deputy District coroner, issued a certificate of accidental death.

The rooming house is operated by LeRoy J. Richardson, sr., James Van Sickle, a radio announcer, who lives there, told police. He traced smoke to Thomas' first-floor room. He could not enter, and summoned Richardson, who opened the door.

The bed was afire, they told police, and they could not find Thomas through the smoke. They summoned the Fire Department.

The fire was confined to the bed and mattress. After it was extinguished, Thomas' body was found in a closet, where he apparently had gone to get clothing and collapsed.

Dr. Murphy said he died of universal burns. Police said they believed the fire started from a cigarette.

Thomas was an attendant at a Gulf gasoline station at 22d and P sts. nw. He had lived at the rooming house for about two years and was not married.

Radio Fan

Girl, 12, Saves Kin as Fire Levels Home

A 12-year-old girl, sitting up "extra late" to listen to a radio-phonograph just given her as a birthday gift, saved her family's lives late Saturday night when a fire destroyed their home, near Bowie, Md., and its furnishings—including the present.

Two persons were injured, the owner of the house, Arthur Aleshire, and Francis Windsor, a fireman of the Bowie Volunteer Fire Department.

Aleshire was taken to Prince Georges County General Hospital, Cheverly, suffering a possible brain concussion and a possible fractured skull. Windsor suffered head injuries when a fire engine struck a tree en route to the home, on High Bridge rd., near Bowie.

The girl, Joann Aleshire, smelled smoke about 11:30 p. m. She found fire in the kitchen, then aroused the rest of the family, getting them safely out of the house.

Meantime, the fire scorched the homes of Mr. and Mrs. Louis J. Scott next door.

A neighbor, Alfred Wilson, drove her to the nearest telephone about three quarters of a mile away to turn in the alarm, which brought Bowie, Glenn Dale, West Lanham Hills and Seat Pleasant volunteer fire departments. By the time the firemen arrived the house was engulfed in fire and flames were licking at the Scott home next door. Mr. and Mrs. Scott and their two children were taken out, but their house was saved by the firemen.

The Aleshires lost all of their belongings, including Easter clothing for the two children, Joann and Francis Charles, 10, and a dog and two cats. One dog was saved.

The child's radio-phonograph was the gift of her grandmother, Mrs. Mary E. Riedel, of Riverdale, widow of Francis Michael Riedel, employed in the composing room of The Washington Post for 40 years.

Aleshire, 44, is a welder in the warehouse of the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission. Neighbors were trying to secure clothing and furniture for the family last night so the children could go to school today. Joann was dressed but the other members of the family were in night clothes.

Included in the loss was a diamond ring valued at $1000, Mrs. Aleshire said. The total loss was estimated at $10,000 by Mrs. Aleshire, who said they had no insurance.

65 Brush Fires Fought In Washington Area

Dry and windy weather was responsible for more than 65 brush fires in the Washington area yesterday, including one which burned 45 acres of brush and timber near Dranesville, in Fairfax County, Va.

Firemen from the Dranesville, Forestville and Herndon departments battled the fire for four hours. In another Fairfax fire, 15 acres in Herndon were burned.

The woman, Mrs. Elizabeth N. Andreachio, of 406 New Jersey ave. se., said she became ill while in a second-floor bedroom. She landed on a brick pavement in the back yard.

Her husband, Joseph, heard her scream as she fell and called police. He was in the kitchen of the home.

Mrs. Andreacchio's condition at Casualty Hospital last night was reported as good.

Two Groups Seek Law Aid for Poor

Two lawyer groups will meet here soon to try to devise a better method of getting adequate legal aid for indigent defendants in criminal cases.

An American Bar Association subcommittee is trying to get a "public-defender" bill for Washington. The District Bar Association, which announced it would resist the bill, has now appointed a committee which may find a solution acceptable to both associations—acting jointly with the American Bar group.

The two committees met last week, and representatives of both are to submit compromise measures in the near future. Ultimately, the entire membership of the District Bar Association will get a chance to vote on a joint proposal.

At present, judges of the courts assign lawyers to defend needy defendants, but the lawyer works without compensation. The "public-defender" system would establish instead an office where salaried men would do the defending.

The District Bar, however, has announced that it prefers court appointment of assigned counsel who are paid for the services out of public funds when the defendant cannot pay.

Compromise measures are to be drawn up by Francis W. Hill, jr., of the American Bar group and by Kenneth N. Parkinson of the District Bar.

Society Fancies Music and Art at This Time of Year

By Elizabeth Maguire

IT'S SPRING, and society, it seems, fancies music, art and the belles lettres. A cocktail party was given yesterday at a private view of paintings and sculpture at the Arts Center of Bethesda, with nearly 100 guests attending between 4 and 8 o'clock.

For this evening there are hopeful conjectures that melodies will linger on long after the concert to be given by Elena Nikolaidi at Constitution Hall. A reception honoring the artist will follow at the home of Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. George C. McGhee. Rosa Ponselle will be among the guests. This famous singer considers Mme. Nikolaidi the great contralto of today, and if the two will blend their voices it will be a treat indeed.

In addition to the Vice President and Mrs. Barkley, the Greek Ambassador and Mme. Dendramis will have as their guests at the concert the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Charles F. Brannan, Senator Theodore Francis Green, Representative James Fulton, the Chief of Naval Operations and Mrs. Forrest Sherman, and Mme. Pandora Tsaldaris.

A portrait of Mrs. Grover Cleveland was presented to the National League of American Penwomen last evening at the Art Dinner at the Statler Hotel. The painting is a gift copy of the Zorn portrait of Mrs. Cleveland, and it was done by Appolonia H. Cassidy.

Invitations have been issued by the Washington Chapter of the National Society of Arts and Letters to a concert by Wilson Ewart on Tuesday, April 4, at the home of Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim. The concert will be at 3 o'clock.

Ranking guest at the Smith College Club tea tomorrow at the Danish Embassy will be Mme. Pandit, Ambassador of India. Mme. de Kauffman, wife of the Danish Ambassador, is a graduate of Smith College.

After a visit in Italy, Mrs. Sperry and Mrs. Lee will return to Washington in early June. They will be accompanied by Mrs. Lee's sister, Mrs. Edgar Arnold of Greenwich, Conn.

British General Here On Visit

LIEUT. GEN. Sir Frank E. W. Simpson, general officer commanding-in-chief of the Western command, and Lady Simpson arrived in Washington on Friday. The general has come here under a program devised to promote better understanding between the armies of the United States and Great Britain. During his visit of several weeks he will speak at military installations throughout the country.

Sir Frank and Lady Simpson were entertained yesterday at a luncheon given by Lieut. Gen. Alfred M. Greunther, Deputy Chief of Staff, United States Army, and Mrs. Guenther, and at dinner they were guests of the Commander of the British Army Staff, Gen. S. N. Shoosmith, and Mrs. Shoosmith.

Irene Selznick, producer of "A Streetcar Named Desire," which is opening tonight at the Gayety, will be given an after-theater party by members of the cast. The party will be held in the Pavilion Room.

Mme. Pandit, Ambassador of India, will be ranking guest at the tea which the Smith College Club of Washington will give tomorrow at the Danish Embassy. Mme. de Kauffmann, wife of the Danish Ambassador, is a graduate of Smith College. Guests of honor at the tea will be 12 foreign students of Smith who, during their stay of three days in the Capital, are being entertained widely by members of the Smith College Club.

Since Easter Bunny Usually Brings Ham, Reader Asks How to Vary The Tradition With a Tasty Stuffing

DEAR ANNE:

With Easter just around the corner, I would like very much to know how to stuff a ham. I have heard lots of people say how good it is and I, too, would like to try it. Also, what vegetables are used to stuff it? Have you any suggestions on what to serve with it? The ham is a country ham, dry salted.

MRS. MARY E. FARRELL,
Avenue, Md.

The only stuffed ham recipe I have calls for a fresh ham. Here's the way it goes:

STUFFED FRESH HAM

1 fresh ham, 6 to 8 pounds
Salt and pepper
Sweet cider
Mushroom stuffing

Have ham boned by butcher. Wipe with damp cloth and sprinkle lightly with salt and pepper. Fill with stuffing, roll and tie securely. Place in uncovered roasting pan and insert meat thermometer into center of leg. Roast in moderately slow oven (325 to 350 degrees) for 3 to 3½ hours, pouring cider over ham after ½ hour of baking. Baste frequently with drippings and serve with gravy made from drippings.

MUSHROOM STUFFING

1/3 cup mushrooms, chopped
2 tablespoons butter
½ cup fine bread crumbs
2 tablespoons minced parsley
½ teaspoon grated onion
¼ teaspoon salt
Dash of paprika
½ teaspoon poultry seasoning

Saute mushrooms in butter about 5 minutes, stirring constantly. Add remaining ingredients and mix well. Yield: ¾ cup stuffing.

To go with this, how about some potatoes roasted in the oven, plus green vegetable and perhaps a side dish of applesauce.? A tossed spring salad and hot biscuit or rolls could also be included on the menu, with lime or lemon pie for dessert.

If any reader has a favorite recipe for stuffed ham made with the cured product, it will be appreciated.

DEAR ANNE:

My husband and myself are leaving for Frankfurt, Germany, soon. Could you or any of your readers tell me what clothes would be suitable, what things are scarce, etc.? We plan to be there two years.

I. L. P.,
Alexandria, Va.

Any recent returnees from Frankfurt who have information for I. L. P.?

DEAR ANNE:

I would greatly appreciate any information or helpful suggestions you or your readers can offer me about train or air travel with a 27-months-old boy. I will travel alone with him from Chicago to California by fast coach Pullman, or air in June or July.

J. J. H.,

New "Town House" Opens

Hints for Redecorating Nest Or Castle Offered at Sloane's

By Lucia Brown

SPRING has brought new finery to Sloane's "Town House"—and new decorating ideas for you.

If you plan to beautify your own nest or castle, you can glean lots of help on a visit to this six-room apartment completely done over in a new design for living. It's on the second floor of W. & J. Sloane Furniture Co., 1217 Connecticut ave. nw., and open to the public beginning today.

"The furniture is traditional because Washington is fond of traditions," said Mrs. B. D. Smith of the store's New York headquarters, when we talked to her here. "The colors and treatment are sophisticated and modern, however."

You've only to step inside the Town House to see what she means. There's a documentary print—emerald and white on a dark green background—on one wall of the long, narrow foyer, but the other three walls are solid dark green. It makes the room look more spacious, and so do generous niches holding classical urns of magnolias.

The living room is beautifully restful, with its greenish gray walls slightly lighter than the velvet carpet. The large curved window is framed by flowered chintz draperies — chartreuse, rose, and blue-green on a gray ground—and graceful curved sofa in gray. Other furniture is modified Louis XV, with simpler lines than most people visualize for French furniture. A round coffee table is made of smoked antique mirrors

Enter the snug library and you note walls and woodwork of deep bamboo beige, a bamboo blind at the window, Colonial hooked rug, green leather upholstery, a red settee and hunting prints.

Blue and green are artfully combined in the master bedroom. It's papered in a design of white camellias and lilacs on a blue ground, while the rug is blue-green. Furniture is off-white in Louis XV reproductions. The adjoining bed-sitting room (or guest room) is in light grey-beige, with red leaf design draperies.

REFRESHINGLY new in design is the sofa bed in the guest room of Sloane's "Town House." At each rolled end are bolsters which can be shifted to the side if you wish to lean back. Upholstery is chartreuse. Walls are light gray-beige, carpeting slightly darker.

Jobe Says...

Thin Sheers Perfect Spring Cocktail Dresses

When I buy my new cocktail dress this spring, I know it will be one of the new sheers—chiffon or nylon net or mousseline or marquisette. In black or in navy blue of course, although I must say I think the white pleated chiffon dresses shown in Paris are the most exciting fashion in cocktail dresses that I have seen in years!

I think chiffon looks newest when it is used as if it were an opaque fabric—double layers in smoothly tailored styles, or pleated all over in simple sleeveless dresses.

New Maryland Tax Changes Explained

Maryland residents, who with other Americans have recently recovered from their annual bout with the Federal income tax, face another tax blank struggle shortly.

For the Marylanders and some out-of-Staters who made money in Maryland must file a State income tax return by April 15.

Maryland is counting on about $24,500,000 from the tax this year—and with your return, you must include a down payment of at least 25 percent of the amount due, according to the Associated Press.

You must file if:

1. You are single, or married and not living with your husband or wife, and made more than $1000 during the 1949 calendar year.
2. You are married, and living with your husband or wife and your combined income was more than $2000.
3. You are in a business which had gross sales or receipts of more than $5000.

"Any income received in Maryland is subject to taxation. Any income of a permanent resident, regardless of where he received it, is likewise subject to the tax."

Which means that, even if you moved into the State on the last day of the year, you are subject to a tax on your whole year's income. If the State from where you moved also imposed a tax, you would have to pay there and receive that much credit on your Maryland tax bill.

Both Ways

Under the law, those who live in Maryland but work outside—such as Federal employes working in the District—are subject to the tax. The other side of the picture is that if you live in the District or elsewhere outside Maryland, and work in Maryland, you, too must submit a return.

Some deductions and exemptions are more favorable to the taxpayer than the income tax forms indicate.

It seems that the blanks were printed before the General Assembly made a few changes in the law. The blanks show deductions allowed for dependents as $400 each. Actually, $600 is allowed for each dependent.

Exemptions Boosted

Personal exemptions for people 65 and older are now $2000, which is double the old exemption. Deductions for dependents in the same age group also were boosted—from $400 to $1200.

And the ceiling on unearned income which a taxpayer is entitled to report on the "short form" was raised from $100 to $500.

Form 502 is the standard form for Maryland residents to file. On this, you may use either the "short form," which the State calls the "optional method," or the regular method. If you're eligible for the "optional method," all you do is to fill out the indicated spaces on pages 1 and 2, tear the return in half at the fold, and send in the "short form" you have filled out.

'Optional Method'

You may use the "optional method" which is simpler and sometimes cheaper, if your total income for 1949 was not more than $10,000, consisting only of salary, wages or compensation for personal services, and not more than $500 from dividends, interest and annuities.

Not eligible to use the "short form" are nonresidents, people who make their livelihood from a business, husbands whose wives file independently and use the regular method or long form, and those whose unearned income from investments exceeds $500.

In the short form, an alliance of 10 percent is figured in the tax tables for extra deductions to which you may be entitled.

Failure to pay the State income tax means a possible $500 fine and six months in jail. Furthermore, you can be penalized 10 percent on back taxes, plus 6 percent interest.

Symphony Closes Its Fine Season

By Richard Keith

The National Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Howard Mitchell, ended its brilliant season with yesterday's concert at Constitution Hall. Ruggiero Ricci, violinist, and his brother George, cellist, appeared as soloists in the Brahms Double Concerto.

The four items on the program balanced each other perfectly, the viscous Brahms Concerto and Strauss "Death and Transfiguration" being nicely offset by Robert Ward's Jubilation Overture and Ibert's "Ports of Call."

Little Belabored Striving

The rarely performed Concerto for Violin and Cello is rather different from the general run of Brahams' orchestral compositions. It is comparatively simple harmonically and contrapuntally and shows little of the composer's belabored striving.

The Ricci brothers turned out a neatly synchronized and vibrant performance. Ruggiero's playing tends to be more intense than his brother's and this, coupled with the naturally less brilliant tone and range of the cello, resulted in a slightly one-sided exposition. Part of the fault lies with Brahms' addiction to the habit of writing low range orchestral string parts, which tend to obscure the cello and to leave the violin uncontested. With the exception of a few shaky spots, the orchestra did its part well.

Cheerful, Invigorating

The Jubilation Overture by the young American, Robert Ward, provided a cheerful, invigorating beginning to the program. Its highly syncopated and disarming themes fit smoothly into its clear conventional form.

The orchestra played Ibert's "Ports of Call" and Strauss's "Death and Transfiguration" with all of their newly found excellence. The strings have taken on a richness which was lacking at the beginning of the season. The solo woodwinds, particularly Lifschey, distinguished themselves.

This year's season has brought forth a new orchestra—one which sounds highly professional and which is worthy of Washington. It has had its growing pains this year, but by next year we expect a superlative series of concerts by this now well-integrated group of musicians.

Society of Natives

The Society of Natives will meet at 8:15 p. m. today in the North Room of the Mayflower Hotel. Featured will be an illustrated lecture, "Little Known Spots Around Washington," by Lawrence Gichner.

One on the Aisle—

Sarah Truax Is 'A Woman of Parts'

By Richard L. Coe

PEOPLE: She isn't what you'd call tall, but she gives the impression of being stately . . . Day I met her she wore a long fur piece and I took her for about 60, lovely clear skin, sharp eyes and beautifully manicured, though obviously strong hands . . . But the amazing, and enviable thing about her, is that she went on the stage in the early 90's, had leading roles in at least 130 plays and quietly boasts she's 77 . . . Her name is Sarah Truax, a cousin of Ernie Truex, though the names are spelled differently . . . She's at the Statler for the convention of the National League of American Pen Women, one of her many other interests in life . . . At the turn of the century, Miss Truax was one of the busiest of stock company leading women and for a decade had what I assume was a pretty demanding assignment, wife of matinee idol Guy Bates Post . . . Miss Truax has written all about her energetic life in a book she brightly calls "A Woman of Parts" (Longmans, Green, $3.50), an outgrowth of her civic activities in Seattle, Wash., where she passed the most recent chunk of her life . . . The key to looking 60 and admitting to 77 seems to lie, as it does in all successfully old people, in her lively insistence on the present . . . She's played theater-in-the-round at Glenn Hughes' Seattle theater and says the first thing to remember is never to look anyone in that breathing-down-your-neck audience straight in the eye . . . She talks well of the theater today and I only wish she'd continued the sharp criticism she has to make of several modern plays . . . At home most anywhere in the country, she's doubly so here: her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. George Kidd, live in Chevy Chase. . . . What I liked most about her is the frank approach to her greatest ambition . . . Though a star on the road in such plays as "The Garden of Allah" and a member of one of George C. Tyler's all-star casts, she never got stardom on Broadway . . . She's frankly sorry about that.

SPIKE JONES, as unpredictable as his music, phones from Eau Claire, Wisconsin, just for a chat . . . Working his way here, he'll arrive at Constitution Hall a week from today with a batch of new tricks that include the Charleston tunes he plays for the new Victor "Designed for Dancing" Album . . . This includes the "Black Bottom," "Varsity Drag," "Charlestono-Mio" and the thing that started it all . . . They're really wonderful . . . The Jones-Helen Greco baby has left the troupe, the folks thinking one-night stands are too much for a wee one . . . Spike chortling over a sign in a restaurant in Rochester, Minn., home of the Mayo Clinic . . . On each table, he reports, there's a command: "Please do not talk about your operation at the table."

IRENE M. SELZNICK is in town and it's a trip three years postponed . . . The daughter of Louis B. Mayer and the former wife of David O. Selznick had Washington all picked out as the tryout town for "A Streetcar Named Desire," but when all that hullabaloo got started, she tried no more . . . With every group that's talked of resuming theater here, Mrs. Selznick has registered for the chance to have "Streetcar" as the opening play . . . She gets the wish tonight when Judith Evelyn stars in the Tennessee Williams drama at the Gayety.

MRS. AUBREY LEE GRAHAM, consultant on films to the American Library Association, speaks this morning at the monthly meeting of the Motion Picture Council in the St. John's Church Library, 21 16th st., nw., at 10:30 . . . She'll talk of recent developments in public library film service.

SIDNEY B. LUST is resuming his longtime job as chairman of the annual Father and Son Banquet sponsored by the Brotherhood of the Washington Hebrew Congregation . . . The Mayflower will see this event Sunday night, April 30, with a circus motif for the theme . . . E. Lawrence Phillips, head of the Johnny J. Jones Exposition, will take care of the circus fixings and Ted Mack, with several stars of his TV amateur hour, will handle the entertainment . . . Proceeds go to the organization's charity fund.

RUTH CRANE, WMAL's Modern Woman, will have Judith Evelyn on her show tomorrow morning at 11:30 . . . Which reminds me: remember that lawyer fellow in the Warner's "Paid in Full" last week? . . . He was played by Jim Nolan, one of Miss Evelyn's "Streetcar" leading men.

SABINA ALONSO, of the Georgetown Theater, will interview actors this week for both the current "This Is It" and a new play going into rehearsal . . . Call her at Decatur 2766.

Pope Pius XII—Priest and Statesman

Pontiff Aided Those Wounded During Raids; Vatican Damaged

Kees Van Hoek, a native of The Hague and now an Irish citizen, has been a correspondent in London, Geneva and the United States. His first biography of Pius XII appeared in 1939. After much research and a private audience with the Pope last fall, Van Hoek has written in "Pope Pius XII, Priest and Statesman," a full and vivid description of the man and his career, from a delicate boy in Rome to supreme ruler of the Roman Catholic world. The biography is presented by The Washington Post during the present Holy Year in 24 daily installments.

By Kees Van Hoek

Foreign Affairs Writer of the Irish Times

Chapter XVI—Rome Under Fire

THE WAR had begun to make its economic influence felt in the Vatican state. Rationing of essential commodities—from bread to petrol—was introduced as early as February, 1940. Not even the Pope himself, nor any of the high dignitaries, sought exemption. In the following August His Holiness instructed all his diplomatic agents abroad—from his Ambassadors, the Apostolic Nuncios, down—to take out Vatican citizenship. Most of them were Italians, but quite a number belonged to other nationalities, as Irish-born, American-nationalized Nuncio Pascal Robinson in Ireland, or Dutch-born Apostolic Delegate van Gylswyk in South Africa. Vatican censorship of mail and telephone was announced in May, 1941, to ensure the tiniest state's strictest neutrality.

Right through the war the diplomatic relations of the Vatican with foreign states proceeded apace, a striking tribute to its ever-growing influence. In 1940, President Roosevelt had accredited as his personal envoy, Mr. Myron C. Taylor, in a letter of credence in which the Episcopalian President of the United States referred to His Holiness as "my old and good friend."

The Chinese government of Marshal Chiang Kai-shek accredited its minister in Berne, Sien Sha-kang, to Rome in 1942, in the same month as Japan transferred its ambsassador to Vichy, Ken Karada, to the Vatican and at the same time gave full diplomatic status to the Apostolic Delegate, Msgr. Paolo Merella, who had been residing in Tokyo since 1937.

Vast territories with flourishing Catholic missions, or almost completely Catholic like the Philippines, had come—however temporarily—under Japanese rule, and only thus could the Holy See execute efficiently its many humanitarian functions, apart from exercising its eccelsiastical rule. Finland, which counts not a thousand Catholics in a population of three million, established diplomatic relations with the Vatican later that year, the first of the Scandivavian countries to do so.

Loss Blow to Pope

THE death in 1944 of his right-hand man, his Secretary of State and his most trusted adviser and lifelong friend, Neapolitan-born Cardinal Luigi Maglione, was a severe blow to the Pope. Pius XII took direct control of the Secretariat of State himself, holding to his decision not to create new cardinals as long as war raged.

With the landing of General Eisenhower's Allied armies in Sicily in July, 1943, the war approached physically the seat of Christendom. President Roosevelt, in a message presented that same day, promised faithfully to respect Vatican territory and all papal domains. But soon differences of definition emerged. The Axis powers had declared Rome an open city, yet Rome was geographically and naturally the nerve center of Axis troop transport, and that transport the United States Air Forces set out to destroy in the raid which damaged so heavily the famous Basilica of San Lorenzo.

Crowd presses close to Pope, his hands clasped in prayer, during inspection tour after air raid on Rome

On that tenth day of July, 1943, the Pope was working in his library when death suddenly came out of the deep blue noon-hour sky. The impact of the bombs rattled the windows of his room and shook the walls of the Vatican palace. His immediate reaction was to take up his telephone to be informed of what had happened. He then asked for his car.

People Cheer Wildly

AS his limousine with the white and yellow Papal standard, unaccompanied by any escort, moved out of the Vatican gates, the cheers of the populace ran like a prairie fire along the route. The Pope went straight to San Lorenzo and as he alighted from his car, bareheaded and without a cloak, he started climbing up the rubble. As he made a move to kneel down, a nearby workman threw down his coat. The Pope knelt on it and with arms stretched out, his tall, white-clad figure like a living cross, he prayed. Quite nearby lies the Verano Cemetery, equally heavily damaged, many graves plowed up by the bombs. Here the Pacelli family has its family vault, from which the lid was blown off in the raid, exposing the coffins of the Pope's parents.

The most touching incident occurred at the second, smaller, American raid on Rome in the middle of August. The Pope, who is the Bishop of Rome, had come to visit the wounded, who were laid out on a street terrace. He bent over each of them and spoke words of consolation and when he rose to impart his benediction, a shudder went through the multitude. A large patch of blood had stained the white cassock of the Supreme Pontiff.

In his protest against the bombing of the Eternal City, Pius XII lamented: "How will coming generations judge the destruction of what have been the riches and pride of all mankind?"

Providence, however, protected the Eternal City. In the short struggle between the Italians and the Germans for the possession of Rome after the arrest of Mussolini and the fall of the Fascist regime, only one Roman square suffered damage—the Piazza di Spagna, where the Bernini-built Palace of the Sacred Congregation of the Propaganda Fide, from which all the mission fields in the world are ruled. In one of the air raids the magnificent alabaster windows of St. Paul Outside the Walls—most glorious of all the Roman basilicas, where the body of the Apostle of the Gentiles lies buried—were shattered. In the Vatican City itself, only some of the new buildings suffered slight damage: the Governor's Palace and the mosaic works.

Thank You, Darling

I know I seldom shower you . . . With gratitude and praise . . . For all your kind, unselfish deeds . . . And for your loving ways . . . I know the credit you receive . . . Is never half enough . . . And often I am thoughtless and . . . Perhaps a little gruff . . . But, darling, when I search my heart . . . The truth is always there . . . That life is sweet because you are . . . The answer to my prayer . . . I can not do without your help . . . And all your good advice . . . And I can only gain my goal . . . Because you sacrifice . . . I know I seldom say my thanks . . . For everything you do . . . But, darling, all the credit and . . . The praise belongs to you.

Sunday Drivers Make a Monday Column

When the sun comes back from Miami Beach and the world smells green and fresh again, I yearn for the good old days.

There was a time when a drive in the country in the springtime was pure delight. When the mood was upon you, the old buggy could be stepped up to 50 miles an hour without endangering anything on the road except perhaps a few stray chickens.

But these days we crawl along in fits and starts, breathing the exhaust fumes of the car ahead and worrying about the danger of the fellow behind crashing into us when the next traffic light turns red.

There are two basic reasons for this condition. One is an inadequacy of roads and highways—which can easily be corrected with the expenditure of a few billion dollars.

The second is the inadequacy of the Sunday driver—and this apparently will never be corrected. The breed grows worse instead of better.

During the week, most motorists have a definite destination in mind, and a definite reason for being abroad.

But the Sunday driver doesn't know where he's going and doesn't care when he gets there—just so nobody else gets there first.

He'll dawdle along in the middle of the road—and accelerate to a reasonable speed only when somebody tries to pass him.

He'll come out of a side road in such an all-fired hurry that he ignores the "Stop" sign—and then chug majestically along in front of you at 15 miles an hour.

He'll turn right from the left lane and left from the right lane—and sometimes he'll stop completely, to admire the view or ask directions. But he'll never stick his paw out the window to signal his intentions.

He'll cause accidents galore among motorists who try to pass him or avoid him—and then boast how nothing ever happens to him, because he's such a careful driver.

In short, he's the hog who takes his half out of the middle. And if the horse ever replaces the auto again, this will be the churl who'll be responsible.

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

In a recent column, you asked how many more boys would have to be killed in front of the boys' club at 17th and Massachusetts ave. se. before authorities would install a traffic light there.

I can't understand how a traffic light would change the situation. What good is a light in protecting children who cross the street in the middle of the block, without looking either way before starting across?

Glenn Carson Russell
3956 Ames st. ne.

Dear Glenn:

Traffic lights do not provide a magic means of preventing accidents. They can only help to reduce the odds against accidents—and then only if there is intelligent cooperation from both motorists and pedestrians.

What good is a traffic light on a street which has been described as a "speedway"? If motorists ignore it, the light is of no value at all.

But experience shows that a light is generally obeyed. It reduces the speed of vehicles, and the impulsiveness of pedestrians.

An orderly schedule of precedence is established, with pedestrians and motorists tending to wait their proper turn—and live a bit longer as a result.

Without a light, safety lectures directed at children often fall on deaf ears. With a light, the lecturer has something concrete to talk about, to dramatize, and to center attention on.

An impersonal light would surely command more respect than a fellow-classmate; yet even schoolboy patrols have done a magnificent job of preventing accidents.

We can't guarantee any child's safety. But I say give 'em the proper coaching at home and in school, and a helping hand of some kind at dangerous crossings, and a great many more of them will live to grow up to be taxpayers—and help us pay the bills for those traffic lights.

Bill.

Famine Rocks Red China Regime

By Drew Pearson

Uncensored diplomatic cables show that an appalling famine, plus sweeping epidemics and a tide of unrest are shaking the new Communist government of China. On top of this, Russia—under pretext of aiding a sister state in distress—is sending soldiers and administrators to turn China into a complete satellite. It is a situation which could play squarely into our hands if we play our cards right.

Pearson

The famine, now officially admitted by the Communists as a "calamitous situation" affects 80 million people from Shanghai in the south to Inner Mongolia in the north. Two million will die of starvation.

The famine was caused by floods that cut production in the fertile Yangtse Valley 30 to 40 percent, also blocked shipment of Manchurian grains to the central provinces, and by withholding of crops by peasants. Farmers hid their grains and cut back growing after Communists grabbed as much as two-thirds of their crops.

Communist "thought" committees are now going through the villages and executing peasants who fail to turn over grain levies. In the cities, an "austerity movement" requires the Chinese to give up stocks of rice on the shelves.

Epidemics are out of control and rumor so rife that the Communists in Sikiang Province claimed that reports of bubonic plague were "incorrect." Instead, their "epidemic prevention corps" identified the epidemic as meningitis.

Anti-Communist guerillas are also active—especially in Kwantung Province around Canton. Rebels in recent moves stripped power lines on the western outskirts of Canton. A band of 600 guerillas attacked grain boats at Shinhui.

Amid this turmoil, an estimated 10,000 Soviet troops have arrived in China. Shanghai is now virtually a Russian-controlled city, with Soviet officers holding key spots in the local police force. Too much use of force, however, could boomerang against Moscow and play into the hands of the United States of America, which once fed part of the Chinese population.

Sen. Byrd vs. Farmer Byrd

Harry Byrd, the Dixiecrat Senator who makes political capital preaching economy, and Harry Byrd, the prosperous Virginia apple grower, should get acquainted.

In a recent speech, Senator Byrd attacked the school-lunch program. School lunches, he said, are items "the parents should pay for. It would cost only 20 to 25 cents a day."

But farmer Byrd made no hue and cry when the Commodity Credit Corporation bought 32,376 bushels of school-lunch apples in Frederick County, Virginia, where the Byrd apple farms are located. The apples were purchased between October, 1949 and February, 1950 to support prices and were distributed in the school-lunch program.

The price the Government paid for the Frederick County apples was $1.70 a bushel through December and $1.80 in January and February. They were good apples, listed as U. S. Number 1, and though Senator Byrd did not sell any of his apples directly to the Government, the price-support purchases are designed to keep apple prices firm, and without it farmer Byrd, the biggest apple-grower in the U. S. A., would have suffered.

What farmer Byrd may not have told Senator Byrd was that so many apples were purchased under the price-support program last year, they were even distributed to schools not normally taking part in the school-lunch program. In fact, the Federal Government last year spent $400,000 for the school-lunch program in Virginia, efficiently run by the Byrd machine.

Merry-Go-Round

A reporter, hailing modest Representative Brooks Hays of Arkansas, asked: "How's the Hays bill?" "Which Hays bill?" replied a congressional colleague standing near by. "The Camp Robinson bill to save Little Rock? The cotton bill to save Arkansas? The civil rights bill to save the South? or the United Nations bill to save the world?" . . . It's getting harder to find doctors who will practice in rural areas. With civilian hospitals overcrowded and Ex-G. I.'s waiting to get into veterans' hospitals, the Veterans' Administration actually has 4000 empty beds. The excuse is that trained medics can't be found to staff all hospitals. But the real reason is that the VA built hospitals so far out in the sticks that medical men won't take the assignments.
